Trade Council Backs Plans Of Roosevelt

Co-operation Is Pledged in 3-Way Program for Recovery.

Industry Asked to Absorb More Workers, Raise Wage Scales.

President Roosevelt yesterday suggested to the Business Advisory council a three-point program of study—the further absorption of workers by industry; the improvement of living conditions of low-income groups by low-cost housing and slum clearance; and the improvement of wages and working conditions of industrial employes.

The council, meeting here under the direction of Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper, immediately accepted the responsibility, and pledged itself to co-operate "fully to consolidate the recovery that we have thus far attained, and to lay a sounder foundation for future economic development and progress."

C. M. Chester, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, expresse confidence here yesterday that "the manufacturers of the Nation will agree with President Roosevelt's suggestion that industry do everything possible to re-employ workers above 40 years of age as a part of the re-employment program toward which we are all striving."

Absence Regretted.

Chester, citing recent surveys as evidence that unemployment in the country is "well below the 3,000,000 mark," said that "personally I know of no studied policy on the part of industry not to employ men above 40 years of age."

The President's letter to the council, dated November 16, expressed his regret on his absence from their deliberations, lauded the council members for their unselfish service, and said:

"Economic and social betterment hinges upon a continuous study of trends, such as are reflected in human thought and action, of our society. Study and analysis of these trends are a vital preliminary to the adoption of plans and procedures best suited to meet modern conditions."

Secretary Roper, listing the social and economic achievements of the New Deal, said these results had been accomplished "in many instances . . . in the face of trying obstacles and reactionary opposition. No one has been more vigorous in deploring these reactionary tendencies of the past than some liberal and progressive business men who have recognized and fulfilled the new responsibilities imposed upon them by changed and complex conditions."

The council's letter to Roper, signed by Chairman George H. Mead, said in part:

"The present operations of the Department of Commerce are attracting Nation-wide attention on the part of business. The Department is by law the business agency of the Federal Government. Any future reorganization and consolidation of Government agencies must afford the Department of Commerce a greater opportunity to fulfill the purposes for which it was established."

More Youths Employed.

The council addressed itself to a study of the President suggested agenda at once. The executive committee of the council was instructed to meet in New York on December 16 to formulate a program of action, and the full council was notified of a dinner meeting in Washington on the evening of January 27, with a business session to follow on the next day.

The National Youth Administration, according to Executive Director Aubrey Williams, reported yesterday that the young unemployed were finding jobs more rapidly in October, as 3,078 young men and women left the unemployed ranks to take jobs in private industry.

This made a total of 14,632 young men and women placed in industry by the NYA since March, when the program was launched, said Williams. Thirty-four cities now have NYA offices, he announced.

As Roper and the advisory council met yesterday the committees of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States held sessions to draft final reports on a number of Government policies. These reports, to be read at the directors' meeting today, will be keenly scanned for evidences of the reported "change of heart" in business men toward the New Deal. Past chamber reports have criticized the New Deal unsparingly.

2 School Weeklies Suppressed Here for Communism Articles, Under Red Rider Restrictions

'American Observer,' 'Weekly News Review,' Published Under Direction of Distinguished Board Banned for Factual Stories on Russia.

Shadows of the "red rider" fell across the District's schools yesterday with censorship of issues of two news weeklies for schools which printed the facts about communism. The two publications are the Weekly News Review and the American Observer, both nationally circulated papers, published in Washington by the Civic Education Service.

In a series of stories about forms of government now operating in the world, both papers, in their issues of November 23, carried articles surveying the Communist plan. School officials, learning of the articles yesterday, immediately "requested" school principals to withhold distribution of the papers in their classrooms. "Only a handful" of the copies containing the Communist articles reached the more than 5,000 history, civics and economics pupils, who subscribe to the papers, it was reported.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, authorized withholding the copies after receiving a report on the "Weekly News Review" article from Principal Charles Hart, of Eastern High School.

Hart had reported to headquarters, Dr. Ballou said, in accordance with instructions relating to use of magazines approved by the board of education. The "red rider" forbids teaching or advocacy of Communism in public schools of the District, and general rules issued by Dr. Ballou order principals and teachers to exercise "individual judgment" about articles appearing in approved publications.

"Principal Hart indicates," Dr. Ballou said, "that he thinks it possible that certain assertions in this article (appearing in the Weekly News Review)) are subject to mis-

Capital Gang Offers Money For Murder of 2, Police Hear

Hearing Set for Monday on Injunction Plea of Witnesses Against Police Escort; Six Indicted by Grand Jury in O'Brien Shooting.

Learning through "grapevine" channels of a report that a "large sum of money had been offered to assassinate" Harry (Spike) Behrle and William R. Carpenter, witnesses in a gangland shooting in Southeast Washington last July, the police department placed a 24-hour escort at their disposal, Maj. Ernest Brown, chief of police, declared yesterday in answer to a suit to compel withdrawal of the "shadows."

This latest development in the Police Department's long campaign against an alleged gambling group followed by a few hours indictment of six men whom police have named as members of the gang in an attempt to eliminate Joseph E. O'Brien in the Southeast shooting. The indictments charged assault with a dangerous weapon and assault with intent to kill.

In an answer filed by Assistant Corporation Counsel T. Gillespie Walsh and David Pine, assistant United States attorney, Maj. Brown sought to show the police escort, which has been so inclusive that the witnesses eat, sleep and work with an accompanying detective, was necessary to prevent them from being slain.

Even so, the two, through their own attorneys, sought to show Justice Joseph W. Cox that the escort is far from pleasing to them. They asked that they be given their constitutional rights to privacy and to go on about their business without constant surveillance of their bodyguard. The detectives have accompanied their every movement since early in the month and yesterday they showed no sign of weakening in the determination to continue their vigils.

To Double Guard.

Meantime, his ire aroused, Capt. Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, announced he will double the guard he had placed about the much wanted witnesses. Last night he announced he had ordered four detective sergeants and two precinct detectives to accompany Behrle and Carpenter wherever they went. Those assigned were Detective Sergeants Joseph Sincovitz, Robert Bryant, Michael Dowd, and E. E. Thompson, and Precinct Detectives Charles Carver and J. K. Baker.

Behrle and Carpenter, seeking to restrain their omnipresent police escort, went into court to obtain an injunction, but were confronted with a rule of the court that the case, coming within the motions court jurisdiction, must be disposed of within 15 minutes or else go to the assignment commissioner for certification to another justice.

That led Justice Cox to deny them a hearing yesterday, although he said one would be granted Monday morning, the earliest open date on the calendar.

Leaders Warn Chest Workers To Press Drive

15 Per Cent Pledge Increase Declared Necessary to Go Over Top.

Tossing aside notes of discouragement which crept into their daily luncheon meeting at the Willard Hotel yesterday, Washington Community Chest workers were inspired to greater efforts as leaders announced contributions totaling $1,193,546.12, and appealed for a "spirit of optimism" in the final drive for funds.

With yesterday's reports showing 19,013 gifts, amounting to $131,808.04, Chairman Coleman Jennings, "cracked his whip" and sounded a call for renewed activity.

"I am going to talk frankly," he told nearly 1,000 Chest workers gathered at the meeting; "We are facing failure if things don't improve. I am still optimistic, but results up to now are insufficient to put us over the top. We have a hard battle ahead, but I know you are in a fighting mood—and that mood will bring victory.

"The Community Chest itself is at stake," Jennings continued. "Washington must remain a Chest city. We

Philadelphia Pier Damaged by Fire With Million Loss

Philadelphia, Nov. 19 (U.P.).—The Moore & McCormick Steamship Co. pier on the Delaware River was almost destroyed by fire tonight and two vessels narrowly escaped being enveloped by the flames. Damage to the wharf was estimated at $1,000,000.

Marine pickets stationed nearby aided police and firemen in pulling ten freight cars, laden with whisky and other merchandise from the flaming pier.

Only the quick work of crews on the two vessels—the Commercial Alabaman and the S. S. Minnequa—prevented the fire from reaching the vessels.

Forsake War Philosophies, Hull Counsels

American Republics Can Set World Example, He Says in Brazil.

Rio de Janeiro Opposes New 'League,' Soares Warns at Dinner.

By the Associated Press.

Rio de Janiero, Nov. 19.—Repudiation of the philosophies that "send weary men to march over gas-poisoned battlefields" is the goal of the 21 American republics meeting December 1 at Buenos Aires, Secretary of State Cordell Hull said here tonight.

The Secretary, who, with other American delegates to the Inter-American Peace Conference, arrived here today, spoke tonight at a dinner in his honor at the Brazilian foreign ministry.

"If we American republics show a willingness to ratify the pledges of peace among us," Hull said, "the people outside this hemisphere will not be heedless of our example."

Jose Carlos Macedo Soares, Brazilian foreign minister, voiced disapproval of any attempt by the conference to create an American League of Nations or an inter-American tribunal.

He asserted the Pan American Union—which has headquarters in Washington—has been highly useful and said there was "no reason to reduce its efficiency" by creating an unnecessary new organization.

"No Ordinary Occasion."

"It is no ordinary occasion that draws together the representatives of the 21 American republics at Buenos Aires," Secretary Hull said. "We are followed by high hopes of all the peoples of a great continent. No immediate difference among us necessitates our gathering. No prevailing fears or profound mistrust compel us to maintain our guards one against the other. There are no deep hatreds among us such as might thwart our impulses to be friends. We are not animated by calculations of special advantage such as might cleave us apart.

"Purposes of another kind draw us together. * * * We meet to affirm our trust and friendship, to combine faith, to make sure that peace shall prevail among us.

"Despite the endless wars that marked all the known past of the world," he continued, "we must believe that the masses of people not only on this continent, but elsewhere in the world will soon insist upon peace in international relations, and be willing to live in a way that will bring peace. If we, the American republics, manifest this faith and purpose, show our willingness to ratify the pledges of peace between us, these events will be hailed everywhere. The people of those countries outside this hemisphere will not be heedless of our example. Nor can we be heedless of theirs. For war anywhere in the world must disturb and threaten peace everywhere. * * *

Walker Calls Art Here 'Fine Picture Of Wallie Simpson'

A mural in the Department of Justice displays a portriat bearing a striking likeness to Mrs. Wallis Simpson, friend of King Edward, former Mayor "Jimmy" Walker of New York told Attorney General Cummings yesterday.

Walker, who met Cummings in an elevator in the building, said:

"Say, General, that's a fine picture of Wallie Simpson. We found it in one of your murals. There is no doubt about its being a perfect likeness."

Mrs. Walker, the former Betty Compton, was with her husband.

Walker, who said he and his wife were in Washington for purely social reasons, refused to point out the mural for reporters.

London Offers Compromise to Franco in Form of Safety Zone at Barcelona; Will Defend Interests, Eden Says.

FRENCH WARSHIPS ON GUARD; ITALY HASTENS REARMAMENT

Latest Bombing Shatters Madrid Bank, Postoffice; Street Cars Are Jerked Into Air, Passengers Mowed Down.

Day's Developments in the European Situation.

Britain warned the Spanish rebels the British navy will be used to protect British merchant ships if the rebels blockade Barcelona.

Italy moved to speed up its naval and military air program to cope with any emergency which may arise from Italian and German recognition of the Franco regime in Spain.

France sent two warships to the Mediterranean to protect its shipping if the rebels bombard Barcelona.

Spanish rebel airplanes again bombed Madrid, killing at least 50 persons.

Catholic bishops, meeting here, deplored Loyalist "extremes" in Spain and urged prayer for "deliverance of the Spanish people from thralldom."

Many Die in Madrid.

By the United Press.

Madrid (Friday), Nov. 20.—Buildings in the heart of Madrid burned furiously early today after rebel planes again showered the city with incendiary and explosive bombs, taking an unestimated toll of lives.

Streets of the capital were filled throughout the night with thousands stumbling through the darkness to seek shelter underground.

Every inch of space in cellars, hotels, restaurants and subway stations was taken. Thousands sought safety in the spacious basement of the American-owned International Telephone & Telegraph Building.

Militiamen and firemen worked frantically to remove nearly 50 men, women and children entombed in the basement of a fish shop struck by a bomb yesterday afternoon. Five or six in the basement were reported dead and nearly all others were injured.

Shrapnel from one of the bombs struck many persons standing near the shop. Police roped off the area and it was impossible to determine how many were killed.

Other bombs landed in the extensive grounds adjoining the Central Postal & Telegraph Building, across the street from the war office and the Bank of Spain. Windows were broken in buildings for blocks around.

Trolley Service Halts.

Street car service was suspended entirely. Tracks were blown up in many sections.

Unofficial estimates said at least 50 were killed in Thursday's raid. A fleet of rebel bombers appeared over the capital in midafternoon. Three of them were shot down by Loyalist pursuit ships.

The attack was carried out by 11 tri-motored bombers, accompanied by nine fighters.

[Bombs struck in the heart of Madrid, partly wrecking the postoffice, the Central Bank and an ornate palace, once the home of the Marquis of Linares, the Associated Press reported. Crowds in the postoffice were sliced down by sharpnel from the exploding bombs, and many were killed. Two street cars were jerked into the air by the force of the fearful explosions in Cibeles Square, near the postoffice. The crowded strap-hangers in the cars were cut down by the shrapnel. Most of them were believed killed. Diagonally across from the postoffice, the palace of the marquis, more recently used as a government barracks, was partially torn down by another bomb.—Editor's note.]

30 Planes Engaged.

Meanwhile, loyalist batteries in the city renewed their shelling of rebel positions just outside Madrid.

Alternately loyalist and rebel planes flew over Madrid yesterday, but except for the one air raid in midafternoon, no bombs were dropped nor did the two serial forces engage in battle.

That one engagement, however, was spectacular. More than 30 planes engaged in it. Finally the loyalists drove the rebels away,

Safety Zone Urged.

By the United Press.

London, Nov. 19.—Great Britain, fearing the spread of Spain's civil war, suggested a compromise tonight to avert a rebel blockade of Spanish ports, but accompanied the offer with a stern warning that the rights of British shipping on the high seas will be protected.

Through its Ambassador to Spain, Sir Henry Getty Chilton, the government asked the insurgent generalissimo, Francisco Franco, to establish a safety zone around the port of Barcelona.

Franco, in a communique charging other nations with providing ammunition and equipment to the loyalists, ordered a blockade by sea of Barcelona and warned "all means of warfare" will be used to isolate the port.

Insurgent authorities indicated the blockade will be extended to other Mediterranean and Biscay ports now in loyalist hands.

Follows Eden's Warning.

The request to Franco, dispatched from Chilton's headquarters at Hendaye, France, along the Spanish frontier, followed Foreign Minister Anthony Eden's statement in the House of Commons that steps will be taken to protect British ships if the blockade threat is carried out.

Eden's statement brought into bold relief the tense situation created in the last 48 hours following official recognition of Franco's government by Italy and Germany.

Eden, discussing the rebel communique, told the House of Commons:

"The rules which normally govern international action on those matters will be pursued by His Majesty's government in defense of legitimate British interests."

His statement, indicating Britain is prepared to take resolute action to protect her shipping on the high seas, was made in response to a question by Hon. Joseph Clement Wedgwood. Wedgwood asked whether ships flying the British flag would still be protected if carrying goods to the Catalonian port of Barcelona.

House Is Tense.

Members of Commons sat tensely as Eden spoke.

It was apparent the British government will refuse to give any recognition to the threatened blockade—in the same manner that it has refused to accept Italy's and Germany's premature recognition of Gen. Franco's dictatorship as the legal and established government of Spain.

The British position was an outright challenge to the Nationalists' claim of control of the western Mediterranean coast and the Bay of Biscay, and indirectly it challenged the contention of Rome and Berlin that Franco already has established an actual government—a brotherly Fascist regime.

Officials reported, shortly before

City Tax Lists Raised by 1,600 With U. S. Aid

Many Other Delinquents to Be Recorded; District's Income Due to Rise.

Prospects that the District's income from personal taxes will be increased substantially appeared yesterday as Deputy Tax Assessor Charles A. Russell reported 1,600 new taxpayers had been taken from the income tax lists of the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

These 1,600 carry assessments amounting to $23,581, Russell said, representing only a beginning, as investigators have checked through just the first three letters of the alphabet.

All delinquent taxpayers whose names are taken from the income tax records will have to pay not only the usual levy but penalties as well.

Suits seeking writs of mandamus to force the persons whose names are taken from the Internal Revenue Bureau's records to file returns will be filed within the next few weeks.

This is the first year the District assessor's office has had the opportunity to check its records against those of the Federal tax collection agency. Its agents have been engaged in the investigation for several weeks.

The check was made possible by Congress in passing the legislation which requires income taxpayers to make out duplicate green slips,

Cold Wave Break Forecast for Today Along East Coast

The cold wave which has visited Washington and the entire Eastern seaboard was in slow retreat last night, with at least temporary respite from the unseasonal, subfreezing temperatures in sight for today and tomorrow.

Fair and warmer, with moderate southwest winds was predicted for the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia by the Weather Bureau for today. Saturday also will be milder, but Sunday somewhat colder, the forecaster said last night.

With New England, the South, New York and Pennsylvania, the District continued to shiver yesterday. A season's low mark of 19 at 9 a. m. was recorded here. At 10 p. m. last night the mercury had risen to 31.

Great snowdrifts lay in some areas of New England yesterday, and last night an itinerant was found frozen to death on a Pennsylvania roadway. Temperatures toppled to a new season's low of 18 on Manhattan, and Richmond experienced a 21 reading, coldest November 19 in the records of the Virginia capital.

Along the North Atlantic Coast mountainous waves crashed and shipping was delayed. Not a major vessel steamed into New York Harbor during the day, the Associated Press reported.

Names of Spies Against Labor Are Published

Blacklist of Several Hundred Compiled by Senate Committee.

By Sidney Olson.

Labor's blacklist—the names of the men and women who, according to the Senate Civil Liberties Committee records, have spied on their fellow workers for profit, became public last night, when The Post secured proof sheets of the unpublished hearing of September.

The minister who shouted anti-union propaganda from his pulpit for pay—"saleswomen" who spread fear among workers' wives for pay—union officials who betrayed their friends and co-workers for pay—their names and records are detailed in the La Follette-Thomas disclosures.

This information, all of it sworn to before the committee in the September hearings, and much of it admitted and confirmed by witnesses on the stand under oath—some of whom are named in this list—will be combined with that to be secured in further hearings beginning early in December as the basis of legislation to protect the civil liberties of workers, it is understood.

The list minces no words. Strike-breakers, in their own language, are succinctly termed "finks." Undercover operatives are recorded as "stool pigeons." The salesmen and saleswomen who, on the pretense of selling merchandise by house-to-house canvass, insinuate themselves into the confidence of workers' wives and break down strike morale, are tersely called "street workers." The operatives who persuade men in mills and factories to spy on the other workers are labeled "hookers."

The spies named were all identi-

Police Round Up 50 Maryland Students to Save 'Em From G.U.

Pregame exuberance led to the Seventh Precinct Station for at least 50 Maryland University students last night.

Rankling at a noisy demonstration staged by a body of Georgetown students on the Maryland campus shortly after night fall, 100 Maryland students returned the visit and stormed the grilled gates of the Hilltop shortly before midnight.

Police, unsuccessful in their first effort to disperse the Marylanders, finally transported a hapless dozen to the precinct station.

Later when Georgetown students, surged out of the gates to meet their rivals, and a clash appeared imminent, police rounded up the outnumbered Maryland group and conducted another half-hundred to the precinct station for their own protection.

At the precinct station a kindly captain declined to place charges against the Maryland men and all were released early this morning.

Mute evidence of the Georgetown band's raid on the Maryland campus is the strange coat of paint worn by the highly prized bronze terrapin which adorns the front of Ritchie Coliseum.

While the main body of Hoyas set up noisy cheers in front of the Maryland dormitories, a special committee applied paint and brush to the terrapin and gave it a new complexion of blue and gray, Georgetown's colors.

Since a body of Johns Hopkins students stole the terrapin bodily a few years ago, it has been imbedded in cement and thus defies capture.

Before the arrival of police at the Georgetown gates, Maryland students painted a huge "Maryland, 40; G. U., 0" on the sidewalk in front of the main entrance and appended another huge notice reading "Three Straight," meaning that Maryland would run their triumphs to three in a row over Georgetown tomorrow.

From inside the gates, Georgetown students jeered their rivals and when a few hot-heads became uncontrollable, Father John Kehoe, faculty moderator of athletics, pleaded with the throng to disperse.

"Demonstrations of this sort, do the rivalry no good and serves no purpose," he told students of both schools. It was shortly thereafter that two police squad cars appeared on the scene.

Soil Conservation, Other Federal Programs Hold Little Hope for Farmer, Says Salter

Agronomy Society Head Sees Nothing but Gloom Ahead.

A rough and rutted road, ending in gloom, is the future path of the battered American farmer, according to Prof. R. M. Salter, president of the American Agronomy Society, speaking before 1,200 scientists at the Mayflower last night.

Tossing a challenge into the teeth of many Federal theorists seated in the banquet hall before him, he said little or no hope can be found in the Government's widely heralded land-use program.

Attacking the whole theory of soil-conservation, crop restriction, etc., as fencing at giants with straws, Prof. Salter said that the last five years of planning had not, and never will, begin to solve our farm problem.

Drainage of farm youth into industry he described as a tremendous economic loss, more important than dust storms or floods.

The withering of foreign markets, caused by new nationalistic trends abroad and unwise tariff

America's farms, means that plowing under every third row of crops here is no solution.

Saying that there are now twice as many farmers as the country needs, because of their increased efficiency with machines, he said there was no answer in decreasing the Nation's work.

Commenting that in the changing world of today agriculture is no longer king, he said:

"Proper land use is not a panacea for the ills that beset agriculture. It cannot overcome the disparities between it and industry. It cannot reduce the enormous costs of distribution which today takes two-thirds of what the consumer pays for agricultural products.

"During the past century industry has doubled and redoubled many times its production of goods. There has come a vast increase in the number and variety

SEC Rejoices As Utility Quits Holdout Ranks

Northern States Power Co. Head Will Recommend Registration.

What promised to be the first break in 11 months in the utility holding companies' almost solid holdout from registration under the utility holding company act was announced yesterday by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Following a conference with SEC officials, Robert F. Pack, president of the large Northern States Power Co., of Minnesota, said he felt his company's interests would be benefited by registration, and decided to carry the recommendation before his directors.

Pack's decision was announced to news men at a press conference called jointly by Commissioner James M. Landis and John J. Burns, SEC general counsel. While there was no indication that all, or even most of the top holding companies that have been fighting the utility act, will soon fall into line, Burns said he thought the vast Standard Gas & Electric Co., of which the Minnesota company is a unit, will "ultimately" register, and others will come in.

The announcement supplied another link in the recent series of developments tending toward more cordial relations and an "era of good feeling" between business and Government.

Both Burns and Landis said they thought it was a definite "break" for the commission, and for the utilities as well. They pointed out that utility holding companies stand to benefit immediately from the lowest interest rates in 50 years, through registration. There has been virtually no refinancing by nonregistered companies.

Northern States Power Co., unit of the Standard Gas & Electric system, now in process of reorganization, has consolidated assets of $252,000,000, consolidated gross operating revenues of $29,000,000 and 13 direct subsidiaries.

It will be the first holding company to register with the SEC since December 1, 1935, legal deadline for registration, if the company directors approve Pack's recommendations.

125 Refused to Register

Sixty-five holding companies, representing only 18 per cent of the industry, registered before the large holding companies organized a solid front to fight the public utility holding company in the courts. Companies subject to the act which have refused to register number 125 in all, Burns said.

Pivotal center in the litigation is the huge Electric Bond & Share Co., which the Government has selected to test the validity of the law, although North American and the American Water Works are seeking earlier decision on their own challenge of the law's constitutionality. Supreme Court decision on whether the North American and American Water Works action should be stayed until the E. B. & S. case is decided is still pending in the high court.

Until these cases have been decided, the Government is taking no penalizing action against the utilities, under a voluntary "truce" declared by agencies charged with administration of the law.

In announcing his decision for registration, Pack said he had decided also to withdraw suit brought by his own company in the Minnesota courts. In registering, he said, the company would "reserve all our constitutional rights."

Won't Lose Rights.

The SEC previously had advised all holding companies that they may reserve their constitutional rights, which gives them freedom to go into courts or otherwise safeguard their interests. Five of the lower courts already have held that by registering a company does not forfeit its constitutional rights.

In reaching his decision, Pack observed that the law already has been litigated for over a year, an early decision is not likely, and it was his opinfon that "the issue will not finally be resolved by any court proceeding." He said he was anxious to do what he could, in the best interest of investors, customers and management, "to take the issue of public utilities completely out of the field of politics and dispute with Government."

Pack said he did not believe it was the purpose of any branch of the Government at Washington to destroy or impair any legitimate investment, and that "ultimately the fundamental economics of any given situation would prevail."

Speculation Begun on Tugwell's Successor as Titular Head of New Deal 'Brain Trust.'

By Franklyn Waltman

PROF. REXFORD GUY TUGWELL'S resignation from the New Deal has inspired speculation as to his successor, not only as Undersecretary of Agriculture and Resettlement Administrator, his nominal positions, but primarily as chief of the Roosevelt brain trust, his more publicized post in the New Deal.

WALTMAN.

It is an appointment that does not come with a commission. It is conferred by the newspapers as a function of their journalistic privilege, based in large part on the recognition granted by the White House to one of the President's many advisers. Not only is it an honorary post—but it is chiefly a fictional one. Since there is no brain trust in the sense of a group which meets regularly, or even occasionally, to formulate legislation and policies, there cannot, therefore, be a chief of the brain trust.

Nevertheless, for the sake of convenience the newspapers used that term, originated by James Kieran, of the New York Times, to describe the number of college professors and other experts who were supposed to do the New Deal thinking and formulate its ideology and they bestowed the title of "chief" or "No. 1" man, successively on Raymond Moley and Prof. Tugwell.

When Kieran coined the phrase "brains trust"—which quickly found its way into American language, becoming subsequently for some a term of ridicule and opprobrium in the slightly different form of "brain trust," he used it to describe a group which acted with cohesion.

The Kieran "brains trust" was a group, including Profs. Moley, Tugwell and Adolph A. Berle, jr., and Hugh S. Johnson, Judge Samuel I. Rosenman and Charles William Taussig, which met regularly at Hyde Park during the 1932 Presidential campaign to discuss the course in handling issues which Mr. Roosevelt should follow, to do research work for him and to assist in the preparation of his speeches.

When the President brought some of this group to Washington in 1933 the name of "brain trust" was fastened on them, with Prof. Moley as the chief because he directed the work of the campaign group of advisers. Soon the term was used to include all the college professors, academicians and experts drafted by the New Deal. When Prof. Moley left the New Deal, the mantle of "chief of the brain trust" was laid on the shoulders of Prof. Tugwell.

With Prof. Tugwell's resignation, all of the original "brain trust" are now out of the New Deal and more recent brain trusters are being surveyed for a new chief. Prominently mentioned are SEC Chairman James M. Landis, Thomas G. Cochran, of the RFC; Benjamin Cohen, of PWA; Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the Treasury; Assistant Attorney General John Dickinson and, although he is out of the New Deal at present, Donald R. Richberg.

None of these, however, now has quite the claim to be considered chief of the brain trust as did Profs. Moley and Tugwell when they were elevated to that empty and questionable honor. Indeed, it is entirely possible that with the passing of Prof. Tugwell to private life, the term "brain trust" will be abandoned and soon forgotten.

Perhaps President Roosevelt greatly desires such an end, for although in the beginning he was proud of the imputation that he had brought brains into government, the term "brain trust" soon returned to plague him. In much the same way former President Hoover's effort to get the benefit of intelligence and experience for his Administration by naming commissions of inquiry became an instrument for ridiculing him.

Although everyone talks of the necessity for getting brains and intelligence into the Government service, ironically the last two efforts to do so have met with ridicule and satire. Yet that is not a good reason for abandoning the attempt. The survival of democracy depends on the competency of the mediums of fact-finding, fact-co-ordinating and fact-distributing. As for the last, there is need for some searching of heart and conscience by the American press.

There is an old adage in politics which directs that "if you can't beat 'em, join them." Some anti-New Dealers seem to be realizing the wisdom of that advice. Prof. Tugwell in going to work for Wall Street and Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., in wooing Miss Ethel du Pont, however, apparently believe it is wiser to "beat 'em and then join them."

Last Steel in Place In Golden Gate Span

San Francisco, Nov. 19 (AP).—The last steel unit was in place today in the span of the world's longest suspension bridge—4,200 feet—across the Golden Gate. The $35,000,000 structure will link San Francisco directly with the Redwood highway leading to the State's northern limit.

Less than a week ago the $77,000,000 bay bridge between San Francisco and Oakland was opened to public travel. The Golden Gate Bridge will not be open for more than a year.

Priest Reveals His Sufferings With Brigands

Father Burns Says He Prayed for Death to Escape Brutalities.

By the Associated Press.

Tunghua, Manchukuo, Nov. 19.—Safe after ten months of brutality and hardship so severe he "prayed for death to end my sufferings," the Rev. Clarence Joseph Burns, American priest, told today of his escape from Chinese bandits who held him for ransom of 5,000,000 Chinese dollars.

Still ill and exhausted, Father Burns described his ordeal to the Domei (Japanese) News Agency:

"It began last February, when I was asked to go to the small town of Hwatientzu to hold a prayer meeting. I was proceeding there with two servants and had traveled about 3 miles from Tunghua, and was passing under a high bluff, when suddenly the bandits leaped out at me.

"They pulled me from my pony, tied my hands behind my back and took me to their den.

"During the next ten months—months of nightmare I never can forget, I was forced to travel with the bandits on their long forced marches necessitated by their activities.

"Japanese Manchukuoan forces were striving to round up the bandits and I suffered incredible hardships from hunger, fatigue and the bandits' brutalities.

"Twice I tried to escape. I failed. The bandits sharpened their watch over me until escape seemed hopeless and I prayed for death to end my sufferings.

"Many times I dreamed I was home, only a awaken in the bleak, cold frost.

"Then a fortnight ago, the activities of the Japanese Manchukuo forces close on our trail forced the bandits to relax their watch and I seized a favorable opportunity to escape.

"I crept away in the darkness, one night, while they were sleeping around the campfire, and wandered aimlessly over the mountains for several days.

"At last, on November 13, I reached the police station at Liutaokomien. I could not believe my eyes. It seemed too good to be true that I was safe and my long suffering ended."

American Vice Consul Davies arrived here this evening to escort Father Burns to Mukden, where he will convalesce. The priest is connected with the Maryknoll Mission, of Ossining, N. Y.

Note in Bottle Tells Of Ship in Distress

Quebec, Nov. 19 (AP).—A cryptic, bottle-borne SOS message, cast up on the beach of lonely Anticosti Island, aroused anxiety for the lives of an unknown ship's crew in the storm-whipped Gulf of St. Lawrence today.

The message, scrawled in almost illegible characters, read:

"Help. We have nothing to eat. We are in the middle of the gulf. S. S. Chabot."

Signal service men were unable to tell how long the bottle had been tossed about on the waters, nor could they identify any such craft as the "S. S. Chabot" in their registries.

Apparently it was from some Gaspe Peninsula fishermen's barque In such a case, mariners held little hope for the crew's safety, since a storm has been raging in the gulf for days.

A message was sent all ships in the gulf to search for the distressed boat.

3 Die, 13 Hurt as Fire Sweeps Office Building at Atlanta

Authorities Fear More May Be Buried in Debris of Blaze-Swept Structure; Two Women Injured in Leaps From Second Story.

By the United Press.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 19.—Three persons were burned to death and 13 were injured today when a four-alarm fire swept an office building in the heart of downtown Atlanta.

The dead, all of Atlanta, were: Mrs. J. Porter Smith, Miss Elizabeth Martin and W. Terry Evans, former star athlete here.

Firemen, after bringing the raging blaze under control, penetrated the smoldering ruins of the six-story Cable Piano Co., fearful that more bodies might be buried in the debris.

Unable to establish the cause of the fire, which started shortly before noon while the building was crowded with business people and students at the Atlanta Conservatory of Music, firemen estimated damage at more than half a million dollars.

Most of those injured were hurt superficially with the exception of two women who leaped from second-story windows to escape the flames.

Hazel Wood, a music teacher, one of those who leaped, was in a serious condition with a broken leg and possible internal injuries. Margaret Milam, 22, also suffered broken legs in a similar leap.

Firemen said the fire appeared to have followed a blast near an elevator shaft, but could assign no reason for an explosion.

Mexican Oil Men Fear Property Confiscation

Mexico City, Nov. 19 (AP).—Industrialists expressed fear tonight lest a schedule strike in the oil fields, coupled with new legislation authorizing distribution of private wealth, might end in the confiscation of property to be operated by labor groups.

The oil strike was set for November 20 after employers refused demands for labor reform, including wage increases and a ten-week vacation with pay.

The wealth distribution legislation was passed last night by the Mexican Legislature and is similar to the already effective Agrarian reform laws, under which large ranches have been broken into small farms and alloted to workers.

Man Recovers, But Wife Dies In Suicide Pact

Financial Reverses Led to Action, Baltimore Salesman Tells Police.

Details of a suicide pact only half successful were told to detectives last night by William J. Glatzel, 48, a Baltimore salesman, who is recovering from the effects of poison which killed his wife.

The decline from a position as sales supervisor of a Richmond, Va., building-material firm to a job selling materials at a small salary, was the reason given police by Glatzel for the double suicide attempt eraly yesterday in the Colonail Hotel, Fifteenth and M streets northwest.

Glatzel told Detective Sergt. Clyde N. Strange he and his wife, Mrs. Minnie Glatzel, 48, had agreed to take their lives—to carry out a mutual suggestion of more than two years ago.

Glatzel said he had purchased the poison Wednesday night. In their fourth-floor hotel room they dissolved the deadly mixture in water, Strange quoted the man as saying.

Both raised the glasses to their lips together. Mrs. Glatzel collapsed almost instantly. She was found dead by hotel attendants summoned by Glatzel about 1 a. m. He told the desk clerk over the telephone:

"My wife is dead."

Glatzel was taken to Emergency Hospital and later transferred to Gallinger. Mrs. Glatzel was pronounced dead by a doctor from Emergency Hospital and her body taken to the morgue, where an autopsy will be performed.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said two empty poison can were found in the room.

Glatzel was reduced to the rank of salesman in 1930, he said. Since that time his financial condition has become steadily worse. His wife, who had been living with her mother in Baltimore, joined him her Sunday, he said.

Congress Units Seek Slow U. S. Reorganization

Senate, House Committees Favor Gradual Shift; To Ask New Funds.

By Robert C. Albright.

Digging in for a long-range attack on Government reorganization problems, Senate and House reorganization committees, co-operating with the President's committee on administrative management, are laying foundations for a program that may take several sessions of Congress to complete, it was indicated here yesterday.

It was authoritatively reported Chairman James P. Buchanan of the House committee, will seek an extension of authority for his group shortly after Congress convenes January 5.

The Senate committee, headed by Senator Harry Flood Byrd, of Virginia, already has an indefinite extension of powers, but will go to the Senate for additional funds early in the session.

Although spokesmen for none of the groups are yet ready to divulge detailed plans, the following conclusions were said to be justified:

Omnibus Bill Unlikely.

That no "omnibus" bill for wholesale Government reorganization, attempting to deal with the problem at one stroke, will be offered to Congress.

That first major steps toward reorganization will be taken this session, but they are likely to be of a piecemeal character, coping with specific situations as they are brought to light.

That the President's special committee will present a comprehensive report before Congress convenes which will deal primarily with coordinating Administrative management, from the President down, rather than with specific mergers and elimination of overlappings.

That the reorganization report of Brookings Institution, based on factural studies for the Congressional committees, which will be ready about mid-December, will draw some conclusions from the data gathered, but is likely to offer no hard and fast recommendations.

That the two committees will disclose little more than "progress" in their first reports filed with Senate and House, with the Brookings Institution report serving as a base for their findings.

Col. Clark C. Wren, former general counsel of the Inland Waterways Commission, has been retained by the House committee, and is keeping close daily tab on the Brookings surveys, with an office at institution headquarters there.

To Report Directly.

Wren will report directly to the House committee at a meeting to be called by Buchanan shortly before Congress meets, and largely on his findings the Buchanan group may base its preliminary report.

The House aspect is operating under the same rule of secrecy observed by investigators for each of the three committees, but from other sources it was learned Buchanan plans to ask the House to extend his committee's life.

A co-operative stride has been struck by the three committees, which started out their studies in anything but a spirit of harmony. There was every indication the Byrd committee, which made the original move for reorganization, will not attempt a "one man show," but will strive to collaborate action with the Administration set-up.

Closely studying the ill-fated history of previous reorganization efforts, from 1930 to the present time, committee attaches are trying to avoid the more obvious pitfalls that blocked previous attempts.

Will Go Slowly.

They are understood to have concluded that no effective reorganization plan can be accomplished at one fell swoop. Instead, they plan to approach the problem with long-time efficiency in view, striking at waste and mishandling wherever they crop up, but recognizing that the final solution may not be reached in one session.

One suggested procedure is to move for successful co-ordination when legal limitations of existing agencies expire. At such times hearings may be held and proposals made to dovetail surviving units into the permanent Government set-up. Co-operation of departments will be asked, and Administration aid sought at all times.

Probably no hearings will be held by any of the groups before Congress convenes. Funds of the Senate Reorganization Committee, to which Congress allotted only $20,000, are now virtually exhausted, and a new appropriation probably will be sought immediately. The House committee received $20,000, and the President's committee, $100,000. Both of the latter groups have made supplementary contributions to the cost of the Brookings study, initiated with Senate committee funds.

Former Slave, Now a District Cleric, Taught Gospel More Than 60 Years

Rev. Walter H. Brooks Says He Owes All to Lincoln University.

Gives $50 of $54 Gift to School, Balance to His Wife.

REV. WALTER H. BROOKS.

As pert as Bill Robinson, as mellow as Uncle Tom, a former colored slave, now 85, reminisced in his little home at 1138 Eighteenth street northwest of the days when he heard Grant's cannon thundering its cry of freedom over Richmond.

He is Rev. Walter H. Brooks, who has taught the Gospel of Christ for more than 60 years, and now is pastor of the Nineteenth Street Baptist Church.

Yesterday he was to speak in New York before the Empire State Club, a day which falls three days after the seventy-third anniversary of Lincoln's Gettysburg address. To Lincoln, and the only university in the country named for him, he says he owes everything.

The aged minister, gentle with the philosophy of years, humble, and the slave today of his only master, the Lord, is hopeful, he said, of living longer only that he may do more good for his fellowmen.

Last week his congregation gave him 54 new silver dollars on the celebration of his fifty-fourth year as their pastor. Yesterday Lincoln University announced he had given 50 of the new dollars to that institution, which educated him after the Civil War. (The other four he gave to his wife.)

The $50 followed a much larger gift two years ago of $1,000, the first and only $1,000 he had ever had at one time.

"Sixty years I waited to repay that school for what it had done for me," he said. "It was on my mind all the time. When I got the money together I wrote out a check. It was the biggest I'd ever signed my name to, you may be sure, and it made my hand tremble a little."

Tells of Slavery Days."

In telling of his slavery, he said: "When I was born, August 30, 1851, my father was a slave, my mother was a slave, and all their children slaves. However, I was blissfully ignorant of my true condition until my mother's owner, a very aged, toothless man—as I recall him—passed to the great beyond when I was a child of 7.

"Fortunately my father, who was the property of another owner, was not involved in the sales which that death necessitated. Fortunately, too, the sales were not by public auction. None of us went to a slave jail or auction block.

"We were all purchased by various Richmond people and became the chattels of four different masters. I was purchased by a firm of tobacconists, Turpin & Yarborough. I was only 8 at the time.

"I can never forget how my dear mother, taking me by one hand and an elder brother, Albert—he was always known as "Prince Albert" or "Prince" for short—I can never forget how she walked the streets of Richmond seeking a friendly buyer who would promise not to place her children beyond her contacts.

"I was with my mother every night, but one of the purchasers brought my mother to sorest grief by later selling her eldest daughter, Margaret, to slave traders who carried her South. We never saw her again. It was very sad.

"My father's master was not my mother's. In the olden days there were owners who bought, bred and traded in slaves as merchandise; there were others who kept slaves to do their work for them; and there were still others who had more slaves than they needed and being unwilling to sell them, rented them out at labor as hired servants.

"It was as a hired servant that my father met my mother, when they were both less than 21. He was very dark and she was exceptionally light. As a hired servant my father became coachman to a devout Christian man. He enjoyed what was practically the life of a freedman, as this man was very lenient with him.

"His master allowed him to use the rig and horse and he set up a little livery business. He soon made enough to buy two or three carriages and horses, and with his profits he proceeded to buy my mother.

"A German consul living in Richmond, Daniel von Groning, whom my father used to drive here and there, agreed to buy her with father's money and then liberate her. On October 12, 1862, she became a free woman. She cost my father $800.

"During this period, I was a slave in the tobacco factory. I had good treatment, but I had to work whether I wanted to or not. But I don't imagine it was any harder on me than it is on the thousands of children still employed in industry.

Sent to School.

"Toward the end of the war, my mother 'rented' me and my brother from the tobacco company, and we came home to live with her. She had employment as a cook and she had us waiting table and washing dishes, etc.

"But she always feared we would be taken away from her again, and her worry affected her heart. She was under treatment with a doctor at the time the war ended.

"On the third day of April, 1865, the city, wrapped in smoke and flames, like some vast furnace belching fires, passed into the hands of the Federal Government, and we hailed our glad morning of freedom."

After the fall of Richmond, the old preacher said, strangers flocked into the city and many gathered at his father's home. One of them took him, an unlettered slave of 14, to the new university and trained and instructed him for seven years.

"And here I am today," he chuckled, "still feeling fine, and still feeling a deep obligation," he added more seriously, "to Lincoln University. All honor to that school!"

Salter Visions Gloomy Future For Agriculture

Science Session Hears Soil Conservative Holds 'Little Hope.'

of its products. These, modern man has learned first to want, then to demand. No longer has agriculture a corner on the wants of the human race.

"While industry has been pyramiding its contribution to the wants of man, agriculture has failed to interest him in eating and wearing more than he ate and wore a century ago, if quite as much."

Discussing the multiplication of farm output after the Civil War, when railroads opened up great new virgin territories, he said the increase then led to surplusses and falling prices.

Cheap food in a few years, he explained, stimulated the growth of industry in America and Europe. The rise of industry temporarily brought new markets and agriculture seemingly prospered. He continued:

"But this Utopia was short lived. What happened in the post-war years, when industry boomed and agriculture was in a continued depression, is an old story.

Markets Withered.

"You know how, even before the debacle of 1929, the foreign markets for American products withered and dried up under the influence of trade barriers resulting from both a growing nationalism in Europe and tariff wars aided and abetted by our own industrialists."

Mentioning new competition, he sketched rapidly the picture of the 1929 debacle: "The contraction in industry, unemployment, the shrink in domestic consumption of foods and textiles, the sustained production of agriculture, surpluses, ruinously low prices, stubbornly high taxes, mortgage foreclosures, revolt on the farms, the fiasco of the Farm Board, the holiday of mortgage foreclosures, new credit agencies, the AAA, the drought years, the agricultural conservation program and the land-use movement."

"The land-use movement is the child of agricultural distress."

Commenting that while planning had its good points, it was also futile in the face of giant forces far from the farmers' fields, he said:

"The weakness in land-use planning is that it assumes that it is within the power of the human intellect to evaluate and interpret all the complex forces which affect the use of the land, and, further, that someone posesses enough prophetic vision to project those evaluations into the future."

Asking who could predict new crop pests, wars, droughts, the effects of technological unemployment, he agreed with Thomas Carlyle's words: "It is no very good symptom of nations or individuals that they deal much in prophecy."

Hits Collectivist Theory.

Denouncing the collectivist theory which dominates present agricultural planning, he advocated an approach in which the individual farmer becomes the starting point, rather than the Nation's land and all the people.

"After all, there can be no actual accomplishment in land use until the individual farmer does something about it," he stated. "After all, such problems as what to do with people on submarginal lands, reforestation, range practices on the public domain, flood control and recreation parks, are side shows to the main tent."

He requested that delegates begin to concentrate on the interweaving of economics with their studies of farm practices, and extend their studies beyond the harvest and on into utilization and the market, if the farmer's plight is to be helped.

Closing with a word to the younger scientists before him he said: "Yours will be the task of making agronomy a living force in the rural life of tomorrow. You will approach its problems unencumbered by the traditions of an era of land exploitation.

"Agriculture is, of all pursuits, the richest in facts, and the poorest in their comprehension."

Army Recruiting Lag Blamed on Uniforms

London, Nov. 19 (AP).—War Minister Alfred Duff Cooper, casting about for a reason to explain diminished British army recruiting, said today he thought the uniforms might have something to do with it.

The customary khaki, he said at a recruiting luncheon, did not go to make soldiers look or feel very glamorous.

Now a smart blue uniform, he said, might do the trick, as "some have now purchased blue uniforms for themselves and have been allowed to wear them walking out.

"I hope at the coronation that all soldiers participating in London will be clothed thus at the government expense."

Managed Currency Aim of Sen. Thomas

By the Associated Press.

Predicting that the world would never return to the original form of gold standard, Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said yesterday he would ask the next Congress to authorize a system of "managed currency" under control of the Federal Reserve Board.

Saying he foresaw possibility of a "money dictatorship," wielded by the United States through a virtual monopoly of the world's supply of precious metals, Thomas urged continuation of the present silver purchase policy.

Thomas said he was drafting legislation to give the Federal Reserve Board power to regulate the value of the dollar through rediscount and open market operations.

U.S. Trade Plan Declared Step Toward Peace

Hull Also Believes Policy Will Bring Prosperity for All.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—Secretary of State Cordell Hull tonight expressed hope the American foreign trade policy would lead to peace and "prosperity for all."

"I may point to the definitely encouraging trend of our international commerce as an indication that we have made a successful beginning of our program of trade restoration," his message to the National Foreign Trade convention set forth.

"The tendency toward decreased trade has been stopped, in many instances reversed. Both exports and imports show consistent gains. We have embarked on a policy of commercial peace. We are hopeful that it will encourage prosperity for all and lead, thereby, to a lessening of the economic tensions that set the stage for revolution and war.

"The liberal, nondiscriminatory trade policies of the United States Government are an invitation to the return of fair and friendly trade methods."

Before Secretary Hull's communication was read by President Eugene P. Thomas, of the National Foreign Trade Council, the attention of the convention was directed to the Orient.

"The new China" was pictured as a potentially important market for products of the United States.

W. Cameron Forbes, former ambassador to Japan and chairman of the American Economic Mission to the Far East, said the "extraordinary road building program" could not fail to "revolutionize business in China."

Men's Club to Collect Toys for Youngsters

A request for used toys was issued yesterday by the American Business Men's Club of Washington.

The group will give a Christmas party for needy children December 23. The toys will be distributed to the youngsters.

Persons having toys were urged to call either Dr. Edward M. Pickford, at National 4230, or Dr. L. M. Lucas, at District 3870. The toys will be called for.

HOW TO CHECK LOOSE DANDRUFF AND SCALP ITCHING

When your clothing is showered with loose dandruff scales, it's time to do something about it. Skin specialists say that excessive dandruff is one of the important causes of hair loss.

Two things can be done to check loose dandruff:

First, shampoo once a week (oftener if necessary) to keep the scalp free from oiliness or crusting, using a rich lather of mild Resinol Soap and rinsing thoroughly.

Second, fine-comb the scalp twice weekly so as to remove loose dandruff scales. Then part the hair carefully and apply Resinol Ointment to the scalp, rubbing it in gently. Persistent use of this treatment for a reasonable time usually brings pleasing results.

Buy Resinol Soap and Ointment today at any drug store. For free sample, write to Resinol, Dept. 22, Baltimore, Md. (Adv.)

Aristocrats Gravely Debate King-Simpson Wedding Plan

Peers Reported to Favor Abdication in Favor of Duke of York; Edward Ends Inspection Tour of South Wales Poverty Area.

By the Associated Press

London, Nov. 19.—Some British aristocrats are debating with gravity the friendship between King Edward and Mrs. Wallis Simpson, an informed peer asserted today.

"I would not like to repeat some of the things they are saying," he declared. "I have told them they ought to be ashamed for saying such things about their sovereign."

The aristocracy's principle fear, this source said, is the reported possibility of a marriage between the ruler and the former Baltimore debutante.

To the possibility that King Edward—who has achieved a reputation of being strong-willed—might abdicate in the face of criticism over the possible marriage, the peers were declared to have replied:

"Then let him abdicate, by all means, and let's get on with the Duke and Duchess of York."

(The Duke of York, King Edward's brother, is next in line of succession to the British throne).

Rhymney, Wales, Nov. 19 (AP).—King Edward ended a two-day inspection of poverty-stricken south Wales with a "community sing" and returned tonight to London to see "what can be done" for his unfortunate subjects.

The King visited Rhymney's social service center just before boarding his train and gathered round a piano with unemployed miners for a song. Someone handed him a songbook and the monarch joined in lustily.

During his tour Edward visited homes of unemployed, interviewed grimy miners without jobs, and saw for himself the effects of long-time depression.

"I have had a very strenuous time in south Wales," he said. "But it has been most interesting. Now we must see what can be done."

At Cambran Welsh jobless handed the King an open letter asking "will an impoverished people be able to joyfully celebrate your Majesty's coronation?" Edward read and pocketed the appeal without comment.

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—Mrs. Jacques A. L. Raffray was en route to England today, leaving behind a statement denying press reports which she said had linked her and Ernest Simpson, former husband of the American woman, friend of King Edward.

Mrs. Raffray, wife of a New York insurance broker, sailed last night on the liner Hamburg. A statement issued through John B. Van Wagoner, lawyer and friend of the family, said: "Mrs. Raffray is sailing to spend the winter in London. She was a house guest of Mrs. Wallis Simpson last spring and summer, and returned to New York in September.

"In order to achieve quiet and avoid publicity, she has been living incognito in New York for the last few weeks. She has an apartment in London for the winter.

"Mrs. Raffray does not know how long she will remain in that country.

"Press reports had linked Mrs. Raffray with Mr. Ernest Simpson, but Mrs. Raffray wished to point out that she and Mr. Raffray are not divorced, although they have maintained separate residences in New York for the last year."

Mrs. Raffray and Mrs. Simpson are both natives of Baltimore.

Blacklist of Several Hundred Compiled by Senate Committee.

fied by either E. E. MacGuffin and A. E. Lawson, officers of the National Corporation Service, Inc., a strike-breaking and undercover industrial espionage agency.

Of their hundreds of operatives, the first on the list worthy of attention is the Rev. Bunch, of Leavittsburg, Ohio, identified as "street, undercover and pulpit operative assigned to break the union, combat a strike threat and promote a company union on behalf of the Taylor-Winfield Co., Warren, Ohio, during December, 1933, to March, 1934." The Rev. Bunch didn't have a number as did most of the operatives. His salary is not mentioned.

Woman Is Listed.

Margaret Byers, of Youngstown, Ohio, Operative No. 75, one of the chief women operators, is described as "street, undercover and special operative. Did undercover work in Ashtabula, Ohio, in 1934 on behalf of the American Fork & Hoe Co., Ashtabula Bow Socket Co., Aetna Rubber Co. and Reser Tanning Co. Was a street operative spreading prppaganda on behalf of the Lake Erie Power & Light Co. at Bellevue, Ohio, from September to December, 1934. Operated during the Johnson Bronze Co. strike at New Castle, Pa., in May and June, 1934. Was an operative during the Val Decker Packing Co. strike at Piqua, Ohio, in January and February, 1935, and worked to prevent a strike and break up a union for the Hazel-Atlas Glass Co., Washington, Pa., during April and May, 1934. Worked to prevent growth of the auto mechanics union in Youngstown, Ohio, on behalf of the Youngstown Auto Dealers Association in spring, 1935."

For all that work, Margaret Byers received a salary of $75 per month and expenses.

George Camm, Operative No. 503-8, of 547 Idora avenue, Youngstown, Ohio, was named as an example of the service's technique of having agents planted in unions as officials—secretaries or treasurers, if possible, in order to be able to name the union members.

Camm became financial secretary of the International Association of Machinists' Union at Youngstown, according to the report, "and furnished most of the material for general reports which were submitted to the Powell Pressed Steel Co., Hubbard, Ohio, in 1934 and 1935, and which were circulated among clients and prospects." In March, 1934, he received $50, says the record, adding "rate varied."

Listed as "Undercover."

Clyde Cassell, of 34 West Cedar street, Akron, Ohio, now living in Youngstown, is cited as another union member. As Operative 616 and 38, he "worked as undercover operative, B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., Akron. Member Rubber Workers Union." He drew $35 a month and $5 expenses.

J. C. Cross, Operative No. 100, of Cleveland, is recorded as a "stool pigeon operative, who was employed as an organizer by the Mechanics Educational Society of America. Began stool pigeon work in Louisville. Operated as a stool pigeon at all general organizational meetings of the M. E. S. A., and in the plant of Mullins Manufacturing Co., Salem, Ohio, in 1934, and in the plant of the Otis Steel Co. * * *"

Cross received $35 per month and $5 expenses for his proficiency in watching labor unions from the vantage point of a labor organizer.

Glen Fisk, of Tampa, Fla., Operative No. 104, a special operative who performed wire tapping and dictaphone work in a score of prominent industries, is given especial space in the report. His salary was "unknown."

Other operatives on the list were paid according to their abilities, with "hookers" and special operatives proficient at spreading propaganda against municipal light and power plants getting much higher salaries than the lowly stool pigeons. Numerous women are listed, but most of these are not highly paid, except in the cases of wives of experienced "hookers."

Classed as Crusader.

William E. Lewis, address unknown, Operative 505, is classed as "an active member of the Crusaders, and a lobbyist, acted to promote sales on behalf of the General Tire Co., Akron." He also reported to the National Corporation Service. He drew $10 per day for his work.

One member known only as "Max" or "Mac" is listed as having worked with Operative 510, Earl B. Trombley, in inciting a group of union men to an attack on a gathering of company union members, when the latter were armed with guns and blackjacks. The attack was for the benefit of a number of Ashtabula industries, and is alleged to have been incited in order to win public sympathy to the companies' side.

E. N. Nemenyi, one of the members of the editorial staff of the Youngstown Vindicator, in Ohio, is noted as "assigned as a stool pigeon to cover and report on the Sixth District meetings of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers and other general labor conferences to which he could procure access on the basis of his press card and prestige." Nemenyi received $50 per report for three years' work the record stated.

Others were assigned to such duties as arranging methods of getting labor leaders out of town, sometimes by securing them jobs in other plants by pre-arrangement as a "friendly act," sometimes by merely arranging "joy rides" out of town for the men.

Hundreds on List.

The list of several hundred names, all of them fully annotated as described above, insures a rush for copies of the Senate hearings on publication, it was believed last night.

Labor leaders, eager to learn the names of the men who have spied on their organization from within, and others are keen to scan the list on publication, it is known.

The type and direction of the legislation to be proposed by Senator Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), Utah, and Senator Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), Wisconsin, who have been conducting the hearings, is still uncertain. The range of the inquiry has been so broad, and so many industries and types of violation of workers' rights have been revealed, that the framing of legislation to blanket the legal range involved will take considerable study after the close of hearings.

'Rum Row' of Nickel-a-Drink Days Theme of City Historian's Speech

"Rum Row," the hot spot of Washington in the days when good drinking liquor was 5 cents a glass, will be described by James F. Duhamel, historian of the Society of Natives, when the members meet Monday.

When Rum Row was in its most roseate 1875 glory, it was a place which would shame the most noisy block in town today.

Rum Row, now occupied by the sedate buildings of The Washington Post, the Munsey Trust Co. and the National Theater, was such a rip-snorting little half-acre, in fact, that its rifraff were paraded out of town once a week, while fifes played the "Rogues March."

Undesirables were picked up throughout the week and put in the Central Guard House until enough had been accumulated, when they were all paraded down Pennsylvania avenue to the Baltimore & Ohio station and shipped out of town.

Duhamel, who was born here in 1858, and is an authority on early Washington, says there were 10 saloons and a gambling house between Fourteenth street and the National Theater, and they all worshiped one god, John Barleycorn, around the clock.

"Good whisky was cheap in those days," he said. "You could get a good drink of rye or bourbon for 5 cents. If you wanted the best the house could offer it would cost you 10 cents.

Women Absent.

"Saloons were the only clubs of the times, and those on Rum Row were always packed. No women in cafes in those days, and no mixed drinks. Just plenty of whisky—with a little water for a chaser.

"Men sat at tables and talked and smoked black cigars. If they felt like gambling, Orlando Jones had a big place standing on the west side of the alley near Fourteenth street.

"There were other diversions, too. The National Theater did a fast business. Bells would ring in the adjoining saloons when time came for the curtain to go up to call back the wandering patrons.

"Shoemaker's saloon had an outdoor beer garden and cafe next to the theater, where there was vaudeville and entertainment every night. The garden was always well filled, and it was a gay, lively place.

"A great change in the character of this part of town took place about 1860 at the start of the Civil War. Previously it had been occupied by lawyers, doctors, and professional people and was semi-residential.

Houses of Brick.

"There was an attractive row of half a dozen two-story, brick houses, painted white, with gable roofs slanting back from the street, and dormer windows upstairs.

"Soldiers and the floating population, which came in during the war times, changed everything. Within a year or so it was transformed into a string of saloons, and shortly was celebrated far and wide for its hell-raising."

Some of the saloons mentioned by Duhamel were those owned by J. E. Brown, J. Kerrigan, C. W. Mitchell, S. Talty, J. Usher, J. D. West, K. Krauskoff, W. F. Stocking, W. H. Hope, Fred Cuzzens, William Greason, Shoemaker and Gerstenberg.

While the last two named attained the ultimate in luxury for the time, that owned by Greason was the only one to survive to modern days. It was at Thirteenth and E and after a recent drab interlude as a dance hall, was torn down.

The times were fast, with a general degradation of morals. Scandal after scandal popped out. Even a later Presidential candidate, James A. Garfield, was accused of fraud in the granting of a wooden-brick contract for the avenue. The thievery and crookedness which dirtied the Grant Administration was a hotbed for breeding saloons and other unregulated districts.

But while all was revelry on one side of the street, on the opposite was a stronghold of that ancient symbol of honest toil, the blacksmithy. Where the District Building now stands was a row of carriage makers, harness shops, livery stables and blacksmith shops, Duhamel said.

The historian pointed out that there is only one drinking place now standing in that once lusty lane known as Rum Row.

and effort are essential to good democratic government. But to all of us, self-government, democratic government, has always been and remains an essential condition of the good life as we conceive it. Such government is government controlled by the people and dedicated to the advancement and peaceful welfare of the people.

* * * *

"It is rare that a self-governing country lives long on hatred, pursues an oppressive course or nourishes dangerous ambitions. It tends rather to conduct its affairs and its relations with other nations in ways that serve peaceful general improvement. Peace, peace everywhere in the world is the natural concern of the democracies of this continent.

"If at Buenos Aires we can make that plain; if we can show clearly enough our determinatioin to remain at peace while being strong; if we can make it more difficfiult for those few who may be willing to use war as an instrument of self-advancement or national policy to have their way; if can make it less likely that those whose lives would be given in war may be deceived as to the realities of war; if we can advance but a little the trade relations between us that serve our mutual welfare; if we can do any of these things, our meeting will justify itself."

Britain Offers To Compromise On Blockade

Proposes Barcelona Safety Zone, but Warns She Will Protect Ships.

Eden's forthright statement of British policy, the Madrid government is concentrating numerous warships in the Mediterranean, apparently to defy Franco's blockade.

May Bring Naval Test.

This movement of ships, it was felt, may precipitate a violent test of naval strength between Spain's opposing forces. The Loyalists are superior in number of ships, particularly submarines.

Eden's response to Wedgwood's question came after the foreign secretary had engaged in a verbal clash with the Communist member, William Gallagher, regarding Italo-German policy toward the Spanish insurgents.

"As far as breaches of the non-intervention agreement are concerned I wish to state categorically that there are other governments more to blame than either Germany or Italy," Eden said, and bit off his answer at this point. Observers believed he was referring to Soviet Russia.

Clement Attlee, Laborite, asked whether the British government would continue its tract policy of neutrality.

"Nonintervention Possible."

"It is quite possible to pursue a policy of nonintervention while recognizing one side or the other as the government," Eden answered.

The threat of a blockade of Loyalist ports, carrying with it constant danger to foreign ships in those waters and grave possibilities of international complications, was an unmistakable threat to sink ships by aerial bombs or submarines if necessary. Nationalist officials indicated the blockade would be extended to other ports, otherwise its effectiveness would be lost.

Britain, while pushing ahead with extensive defense preparations, including enlargement of her armed forces, made it clear she will attempt to hold Italy and Germany rigidly to their pledges of neutrality as regards Spain's strife.

France to Send Warships.

Paris, Nov. 19 (AP).—France has decided to maintain a cruiser and a destroyer off Barcelona in the face of a Spanish insurgent threat to blockade the port, sources close to the government said today.

Representatives of the foreign and naval ministries decided to station the cruiser Dupleix and the destroyer Albatross in Catalan waters to protect French rights.

There are no French merchant ships at Barcelona at present, however.

The French Mediterranean fleet of 2 battleships, 5 cruisers, 13 destroyers and 8 submarines now is engaged in maneuvers "somewhere" between Toulon and Perpignan.

From the Toulon base, it was pointed out, ships could cover the 150 miles to Barcelona in fewer than five hours if necessary.

Italy's Arming Sped.

Rome, Nov. 19 (AP).—Premier Mussolini and his Fascist grand council today ordered speeding of air and naval armaments in case Italian and German recognition of the Spanish Fascist insurgents should bring serious international complications.

The accredited Italian charge d'affaires, Filippo de Ciutiis, tonight was en route aboard an Italian warship to the seat of the provisional government of the insurgent Gen. Francisco Franco.

As Mussolini's foreign office gathered in foreign reaction to the German and Italian recognition of Franco yesterday, the Fascist grand council declared "the military preparations of Italy in this special moment must be accelerated, above all in the aerial and naval fields."

The Spanish situation, official circles were agreed, was the proper interpretation of the "special moment" phrase.

Fear of Aid Scouted.

European fears that Italy and Germany might send direct aid to the forces of Gen. Franco now that they have approved his government as the legal one in Spain were scouted by competent government sources.

There was no reason to believe, these sources said, that the action in any way would affect Italy's position as a member of the London nonintervention committee.

Italian officials throughout the day kept in close touch with Germany to ascertain what the consensus of foreign reaction would be to their joint action.

A source authorized to speak for the government said Italy did not expect a break with Soviet Russia, the most strident foreign supporter of the constituted Spanish Madrid government.

"There will be no out-and-out break with Russia unless something is done by the Soviet which will affect the Italian interests in Spain," this source said.

Official Italian circles expressed confidence other nations soon will follow the Italian and German lead in recognizing Franco's regime.

The Stefani (Italian) News Agency reported Austria and Hungary will formally approve the Spanish Fascist junta soon.

Italian recognition, an authoritative source said, rather than having made the Spanish situation more critical should make for speedier peace, because if other nations side with Italy, the war would be as good as over.

Reserve Board Acts to Restrict Margin Dealing

Amendment of Regulation Against 'Shoestring' Trade Proposed.

Tentative regulations striking at "shoestring traders" on the securities exchanges, with the apparent aim of tightening up trading operations, were announced yesterday by the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System.

The new regulations, submitted to the 12 Federal Reserve Banks for their consideration in the form of an amendment to regulation T, slaps at trading which is not backed by the amount of cash required by Federal law, which is now 55 per cent of the purchase price.

The present regulation, for the convenience of customers and brokers, allows a "certain number of days" within which the required 55 per cent margin may be put up after a purchase is made.

"Shoestring traders," operating under a system known as "in-and-out" trading, buy large quantities of stocks on margin and sell them again within three or four days, avoiding in this way the furnishing of the required margin.

This "weakness" in the regulation would be patched up swiftly by the amendment, which would make the broker require that any customer buying securities on margin put up the required margin in advance of the purchase—or not later than the end of the day on which the purchase is made.

This was the third Administration step in less than a week toward stricter supervision of the booming stock market.

Last Friday the President directed attention to the possible dangers inherent in the foreign investments, amounting to about $7,000,000,000, on both foreign exchange and security markets.

Wednesday James M. Landis, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, announced that the SEC would speed up new regulations to control trading by members and partners of exchanges, looking toward broker-dealer segregation.

Yesterday the Federal Reserve Board's move was apparently designed to prevent "churning" of the market by large operators.

Meanwhile the open-market committee of the Federal Reserve System, composed of the six members of the board and five representatives of the 12 Reserve banks, discussed the $2,260,000,000 excess reserves of the banking system, which is the nucleus of a possible credit boom, and methods by which these huge reserves may be controlled. The continued influx of gold to this country, steadily adding to excess reserves, was also a subject of consideration.

Some observers held that the possibility of further increasing reserve requirements is not yet out of bounds, and that a market operation to decrease reserves is still possible.

The banks are to report back their opinion on the tentative amendment by December 7.

Robber Gets $45; Flees in Taxicab

A lone robber, with a flair for the spectacular, held up a filling station about 100 yards from the Tenth Precinct Station early yesterday and escaped with $45.

Entering the station, located at Georgia avenue and Park road northwest, about 3:30 a. m., the robber drew a gun on Robert K. Sutton, of 1318 Eleventh street northwest, night manager, and demanded the receipts.

Sutton ran to the police station on Park road and reported the robbery. He said he gave the man all the money in the cash register. The intruder escaped in a taxicab, which was waiting outside, Sutton declared.

Japanese Flier Shot Down by Chinese Troops

Nanking Reports Invaders Repulsed on All Fronts in Suiyuan Area.

By the United Press.

Peiping (Friday), Nov. 20.—A Japanese military airplane assisting Manchu-Mongol pro-Japanese forces invading Suiyuan province in North China was shot down by Chinese antiaircraft batteries yesterday, according to Chinese military dispatches today.

Modern equipment from Nanking has reached the Suiyuan defense forces and the "enemy is being repulsed on all fronts," the dispatches said.

The Japanese plane crashed in flames between Pingtichuan and Taolin, where the Chinese intrenched positions have been subjected to repeated aerial bombardments.

Japanese residents have evacuated Tatsung because of spread of the fighting.

Chinese dispatches said 5,000 reservists of the Japanese army have been employed by the Manchu-Mongol forces to aid the invasion.

A number of trained regiments from Nanking, with tanks and anti-aircraft guns, have arrived to bolster the Chinese defense.

The main body of the Chinese air force, consisting of more than 200 modern planes most of American make, was expected to be sent to the front shortly.

Travelers reaching Nanking from Suiyuan said the Manchu-Mongols have received extensive aerial reinforcements and now have air fields with bombers and scout planes at several points in eastern Chahar.

Russell's Wound, Gun Correspond

Los Angeles, Nov. 19 (U.P.).—The bullet that killed Reid Russell in front of the Manhattan Beach home of Gouverneur Morris, noted novelist, was of the same caliber as a gun gripped in the dead man's hand.

This announcement—lending added confusion to the strange death case, originally filed away as a simple suicide—was made by Dr. Frank Webb, autopsy surgeon, who examined the slain youth's body tonight.

The body was exhumed after Capt. Clyde Plummer, investigator for the district attorney's office, said he had "reason to believe the gun found with Russell's body was not the weapon used to kill him."

The slug which killed Russell has not been found, but a police ballistics expert said the gun lying beside the body had not been fired for a year.

Only U. S., Chinese Now Desire Peace, Linebarger Says

Only two nations on earth today desire peace, the United States and China, Judge Paul Linebarger, celebrating the thirtieth anniversary of his representation of the Chinese National Government here, told guests at a reception at his home, 2006 R street northwest, yesterday.

"These nations," said Judge Linebarger, "have civilized themselves to a point where they believe business, and not guns, conquer. They are coming closer and closer together in their programs of business."

Judge Linebarger became representative of the Sun Yat Sen Government on November 19, 1906. He has represented the National Government, with headquarters at Nanking, ever since then.

Two Air Raids Take Big Toll, Ravage Madrid

having brought down three of their planes.

Wednesday night rebels and loyalists southwest of the city fought an intensive battle. The sound of their firing was drowned out only when a rebel plane flew over the city early yesterday while it was yet dark and dropped a 2,000-pound bomb in the central part of the city.

Another bomb landed near the 12-story American-owned International Telephone and Telegraph building, but did little damage.

Fires still were burning inside the Montana barracks, which we ignited two nights ago by an incendiary bomb.

Further evacuation of the civilian population is being rushed.

Nationalist forces are progressing steadily along the road from Irongate to El Pardo and it looks as though they soon will control all northwest Madrid.

Yesterday marked the beginning of the fifth month of the civil war, which is estimated already to have cost 225,000 lives and billions of dollars in property.

Woman's Body Found

San Antonio, Tex., Nov. 19 (A.P.).—Scantily clad and battered, the body of a pretty, sandy-haired woman about 25 years old was found today on a highway near here. Capt. J. W. Bryant, of the county highway patrol, said the unidentified young woman apparently had been slain elsewhere and her body thrown from a motor car.

Army Accepts Plan to Reduce Size of Division

Cut From 22,000 to 13,500 Provided to Speed Up Combat Units.

The combat division, phalanx of modern mechanized warfare, is to be more compact and mobile, according to plans adopted yesterday by the War Department.

Approval was given by the department for tentative reduction in the man power of combat divisions from 22,000 to 13,500 to speed their striking power.

It is believed that reduction of the size of the division will increase its strategical and tactical mobility and augment striking speed to be gained by motorization.

More Planes Wanted.

Simultaneously, Secretary of War Woodring announced the department plans to ask Congress for funds to purchase 700 fighting airplanes in the coming fiscal year.

This would be approximately 100 more planes than the Army bought with the $33,000,000 allotted during the present fiscal year. The remainder of this fund yesterday was awarded North American Aviation, Inc., for 120 observation ships.

The reorganization of combat divisions is to be undertaken experimentally as a part of the Army's five-year plan of mechanization and modernization, which includes gradual acquisition of tanks, motorized cavalry equipment, motorized artillery and other apparatus to make the Nation's land forces an "army on wheels."

Proposed for Tests.

The plan is that the size of the division will be reduced almost half, with the size of regiments, battalions and companies reduced proportionally.

The proposal will first be studied at service schools. Next summer it will be applied to one division, and if successful reorganization of the entire Army will follow.

War experts believe that the division with the reduced number of men, due to its increased mobility and the increased efficiency of modern rifles, machine guns and artillery will have as much or more "fire power" as the larger division did under former conditions.

Two-Alarm Blaze Wrecks 2 Homes

Two frame houses at 402 and 404 B street southeast were partially destroyed by fire yesterday when an overheated furnace sent flames raging through three floors, drove two families to the street and caused firemen to sound a second alarm.

The blaze started in the home of Mrs. Naomi Nichols, colored, 404 B street, and spread quickly to the adjacent house occupied by John H. Dyson, also colored. Both families and several roomers escaped without injury.

Heavy smoke clouds attracted more than 500 spectators. Interiors of the two frame dwellings were destroyed. In the face of a bitter wind, firemen battled the flames for nearly half an hour before bringing the fire under control. Damage was estimated at $1,000.

Others in the houses who fled to the street were John Nichols, 17, Melvin Nichols, five, Mrs. Anne Hawkins, elderly sick woman who was helped from her burning room by passersby; Mrs. John Dyson, 68, Mrs. Josephine Carver and Ella Turner, all colored.

Hoeppels' Lawyer Free on $1,000 Bail

Richmond, Nov. 19 (A.P.).—Jesse C. Duke, charged with harboring Representative John H. Hoeppel and his son, Charles J. Hoeppel, here prior to their arrest as Federal fugitives, posted bond of $1,000 early tonight for his appearance before the April grand jury in U. S. District Court.

Assistant District Attorney John W. Cogbill said $500 of the bond was in cash and the remainder was covered by a real estate bond supplied by "a relative."

The Washington attorney obtained his release shortly after his wife tearfully pleaded before U. S. Commissioner Melvin Flegenheimer, who ordered Duke held for grand jury action, that the amount be reduced to $500.

Government attorneys, however, opposed the request and the commissioner declined to reduce the surety.

With the posting of bond, Duke was freed from the Henrico County jail, where Representative Hoeppel and his son, Duke's former clients, are confined pending action of the U. S. Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals on his appeal from District Judge Robert N. Pollard's dismissal here of a writ of habeas corpus.

Mother Kills Self, 2 Children Under Wheels of Train

Northwood, N. Dak., Nov. 19 (A.P.).—Kneeling before an onrushing train, her babies clasped in her arms, a Northwood mother tonight killed herself and her two small children near here.

The mother, Mrs. Belle Paulson, 30, left behind an incoherent note, telling of her intention to destroy herself under the train wheels, and begging her husband, Ray, "to forgive me—I hope I will see you again."

Killed with her were an infant son, Roumaine, and a second son, O'Clair, 6 years old.

Strike Not Over, Students Declare

M. Brent Oldham, head of the Howard University student strike committee, declared last night that the return of the student body to classes last Monday had by no means ended either the student strike or the football team strike.

Oldham's committee, regarding all measures considered thus far by the board of athletic control as unofficial and informal, denied vigorously "that any formal action in settlement of the strike situation has been taken." The strike committee, Oldham insisted, is still awaiting an official answer to a communication addressed Monday to the board of athletic control.

An executive committee of the university board of trustees is expected to give consideration to the strike situation at a meeting today on the university campus. Nothing short of a satisfactory formal communication from the board of athletic control or from the trustees will prevent the calling of another student strike next Monday, Oldham declared.

Joint Chest Drive Benefits Counties

Counties immediately surrounding Washington and the city of Alexandria have benefited for a total of $13,070.12 through the cooperative campaign conducted with the Community Chest.

Chest solicitors in the group solicitation and governmental units have received pledges for the suburban areas to this amount according to reports made public yesterday by Councilor & Buchanan, certified public accountants, who are auditing the county gifts.

The average pledge made to the counties is $7.04. They have received 1,855 contributions from Washington. The number of pledges and amount designated to each section is as follows:

Alexandria, 217 pledges, $1,410.46; Arlington County, 584 pledges, $3,591.65; Fairfax County, 175 pledges, $1,519.51; Montgomery County, 611 pledges, $5,031.25, and Prince Georges County, 268 pledges, $1,517.25.

Capital Park Body Opposes Abattoir

Indorsing the stand taken by its chairman, Frederic A. Delano, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday adopted a resolution opposing construction of an abattoir at Benning and Anacostia roads northeast.

The planners voted to instruct members of the commission staff to assist the District Commissioners in their court fight to prevent Adolf Gobel, Inc., from building and operating the Northeast slaughter house.

The commission decided to bring Harland Bartholomew and Alfred Bettman here for conferences in connection with proposed revision of the zoning laws and regulations to bar "nuisance industries" from Washington. Bartholmew, a St. Louis resident, is the commission's zoning expert. Bettman is chairman of the city planning commission of Cincinnati.

Johns Hopkins Head Attacks Bureau Growth

Urges Alumni, Reorganized Here, to Challenge All New Units.

More than 150 members of the Johns Hopkins Alumni Association of Washington heard Dr. Isaiah Bowman president of Johns Hopkins, warn against dangers of accepting new Government bureaus without challenging their immediate value.

"You know, as well as I do," he said, "that bureaucracy is a self-stimulating force, that the size of the national budget is beyond all reason and that office-holding has become a disease.

"You have a right to challenge every new agency with respect to real values, not paper values; you have a right to look at the lag between the time that the agency is founded and the time that its efforts yield practical results, and as a citizen you are expected to ask that priorities of importance be regularly revised in order that we may do the most important things first and not attempt to do more than we can afford to do."

By intimation rather than direct assertion, Dr. Bowman defended the position of the college professor who, he said, often is suspected of being a mere theorist. He said the academician is necessary in order to discuss objectively what he called "the two important things in this world from the educational point of view, the individual and the relations of individuals."

At the meeting held on Wednesday primarily to reorganize the local alumni group after several years of inactivity, the following new officers were elected: President, Dr. W. J. Humphreys; vice president, Dr. Lyman J. Briggs; secretary, James Lee Bost; assistant secretary and treasurer, Pierre Ghent.

School Papers Printing Soviet Study Banned

News Weekly, American Observer Suppressed Under Red Rider.

understanding and might be variously interpreted."

The article appearing in the Weekly News Review is "almost the same" as the one published in the American Observer, the editors said.

Under the title of "Communist Plan of Government Studied," the American Observer article traces the course of economic and industrial activities in Russia during the 19 years of Soviet regime.

"Now it is a fact that Russia has made great industrial progress under Communism," one paragraph reads. "There has been no depression, of the capitalist variety, in that country. Unemployment is never a problem. * * *

"This does not mean, though, that the living standards in that country are high. Compared with the standards of employed Americans, they are extremely low * * *"

The article points out that the Soviet government provides for a Congress to which voters send delegates, but adds that "this Congress does not govern the country. Nor does the rank and file of the Communist Party."

"At the head of this party (the Communist)," the discussion continues, "is Josef Stalin, who holds Russia in an iron grip. He dominates the nation to as great an extent as does Hitler in Germany and Mussolini in Italy."

Carried Article on Fascism.

Civic Education Service officials last night described the objectionable article as similar to many others that have appeared in the publications for years. It was pointed out that issues preceding the one carrying the article about communism had contained similar discussions of the democratic form and of the Fascit type of government. There had been no objections to these earlier articles, it was reported. In fact, they said, the magazines' office received many commendations from educators throughout the country on its policy of fair presentation of "all sides of the problem" studied.

The Weekly News Review, the American Observer, and the Junior Review, a third school paper published by the service, have a total circulation of a half million throughout the country.

Walter E. Myer, a former history professor in the Kansas State Teachers College who served on the research staff of the United States Tariff Commission from 1918 to 1920, is editor of the publications, and with several other prominent sociologists and economists directs the editorial policies.

Board Members Prominent.

On the editorial board are Charles A. Beard, noted historian and writer on American politics; Harold G. Moulton, president of the Brookings Institution; David S. Muzzey, author, whose book, "James G. Blaine, a Political Idol of Other Days," was given honorable mention by the Pulitzer Prize jury in 1934, and Fred J. Kelly, noted educator and author who has served as chief of the college and professional schools division, United States Office of Education.

The Civic Education Service was organized in 1925 and has published school periodicals ever since.

It has published analytical articles on the several forms of government each fall for several years, according to officers of the service. They pointed out that the censored article on communism, like those of previous years, outlined accomplishments as well as shortcomings of Communist Russia.

School officials yesterday withheld comment on their views about the article, which is of the type that has plagued them since enactment of the "red rider" as part of the Congressional appropriation act a year and a half ago.

Avoid Subject.

Since that time the administrative staff, the principals and teachers, for fear of losing their pay, have taken extreme care to avoid the subject of communism. Chapters in textbooks bearing on the present form of government in the Soviet union have been skipped. Magazines containing articles on the subject have been barred from the classroom.

Last year the magazine Scholastic was charged with communistic tendencies. It was later cleared of the charges by a special investigating committee, and the Board of Education last Wednesday received a teachers' committee recommendation that it be placed back on the "approved list." The board, however, has not yet acted.

The board, meanwhile, awaits convening of the new Congress to renew its fight for repeal of the "red rider." That fight is temporarily, at least, without a leader, for Representative Fred J. Sisson, of New York, who championed the cause through the last session, failed to be re-elected.

Representative Thomas L. Blanton, of Texas, who as chairman of the District Appropriations Committee, steered the "red rider" clause to enactment, was defeated, however.

The Board of Education and Dr. Ballou, with support of civic organizations throughout the District, led an unsuccessful fight to have the rider repealed at the last session of Congress.

Gang Offers Cash for Their Lives

Because a large sum of money has been offered for their murder, a 24-hour police guard has been maintained over William Carpenter (standing, right) and Harry Behrle (seated, left), police witnesses in the shooting of Joseph E. O'Brien, alleged victim of gang vengeance. The story of the cash offer for murder was told yesterday in Police Superintendent Brown's answer to suit filed by attorneys for Carpenter and Behrle, Joseph Donohue (standing) and Myron Ehrlich (seated), to compel the department to remove officers detailed to watch them day and night.

City's Tax List

these to be available for examination by local taxing authorities.

For years the personal property tax has been the most difficult levy the District has had to collect. As a consequence, efforts have been made to substitute a local income tax for the intangible personal property levy.

Washingtonians with personal property beyond exemptions allowed for normal households are required to file returns during July every year, but many admittedly escape detection after failing to do so.

Whenever the assessor's office discovers a delinquent taxpayer, however, the law allows imposition of an immediate 20 per cent penalty, plus a 1 per cent interest charge, and court costs if the assessor's office sues for a writ of mandamus.

This year about 37,000 personal property tax returns were filed during July, and it is expected these will produce about $2,000,000 on intangibles and $1,000,000 on tangibles.

The tax assessor has actually checked 2,600 names of Washington income taxpayers, Russell explained, but 400 of these have been dismissed as investigation showed they have not enough personal property to be liable to the District tax.

Twenty-two hundred demands have been mailed to the remainder, but only 1,600 of these so far have been definitely shown to be subject to the levy. The other 600 are still in doubt.

District tax officials recognize that many of the delinquents have failed to file returns because of ignorance of the local law. That, however, they explain, does not exempt them either from the tax payment or the penalty.

Gang 'Reward' For Killing Two Raised, Report

Maj. Brown Defends Police Escort; 6 Are Indicted in O'Brien Case.

source that Carpenter and Behrle were "on the spot," sought to protect them through constant shadowing. The information was gleaned on November 10.

The threat to their lives was known to the men, the answer stated, and they appeared willing to suffer the protection. It was said Behrle was one of the group in the three cars figuring in the O'Brien shooting, although he was being held against his will. Carpenter was with O'Brien when the shooting occurred, but escaped uninjured.

A suggestion the two live together, which has been followed, was made in the interest of economy, so that fewer police would be needed, it was said. Furthermore, assignment of the ocers ffiwas "an exercise of only the proper police function of keeping the plaintiffs under surveillance and guarding them against serious injury or death which had been threatened," Maj. Brown said.

Six Named in Indictment.

In the indictment brought in by the grand jury, the six men charged with attempting to kill O'Brien are named as follows: Charles R. (Rags) Warring, Joseph S. Bond, Samuel S. Montgomery, George T. Tear, Clarence Ware and John Sweeney. All are held under bail awaiting the outcome of the charges.

O'Brien, accompanied by Carpenter, was standing near Second and B streets southeast last July when three automobiles drew up beside him. He was called to one of the cars and was felled by a blow. While he lay prostrate on the sidewalk, two shots were fired into his body, one of them shattering his knee cap.

Since then he has been in the hospital and is permanently crippled. Recently he refused to testify before the grand jury and was ordered to tell his story after Justice Peyton Gordon, in Criminal Court, had ordered him to testify. Harry (Spike) Behrle, who is said to have witnessed the shooting, also was ordered to testify after he had been brought before Justice Gordon with O'Brien. William R. Carpenter, who was with O'Brien when he was shot, previously had told his story of the shooting to the grand jurors.

Each Charged Separately.

The indictment, in eight counts, charges the gun used in the O'Brien shooting was in the hands of each of the six accused men, and the seventh count charged the shooting was done by some person in the group whose identity was unknown. The remaining count charged all with assault with intent to kill.

Others indicted were Benjamin Simmons, Horace Simmons, Mattie Dupree, Samuel J. Hanna, John P. Byers, George M. Rieffer and James Underwood, grand larceny; Elmer Warner, James Underwood, Philip Hawkins and John Beverly, housebreaking and larceny; James Brown, William Smith, Robert M. Johnson, Clarence Sweeney and Lancaster Washington, joy riding.

Thomas Henry Hook, Samuel Tarver and Mikady Hall, gaming charges; Milo E. Emerson, embezzlement; Hilda Thomas and Frank J. Norwood, violation of section 73, title 18, U. S. code.

The grand jury ignored charges against Edward Francis Kelly, gaming, and Robert T. Wood, homicide.

Cleveland, Nov. 19 (AP).—Maurice Maschke, 68, former Republican National Committeeman and veteran political leader, died tonight.

Monarchists Observe Otto's 24th Birthday

Vienna, No. 19 (AP).—Austrian Monarchists, meeting on the twenty-fourth birthday of the claimant to the non-existent throne, Prince Otto of Hapsburg, heard speakers urged the restoration of Otto—but with an empress.

Some listeners got the impression Otto was contemplating marrying.

(There have been recent rumors he would wed 22-year-old Princess Maria of Italy.)

Split Decision On Neutrality Law Foreseen

Questions of Chief Justice Suggest Division of High Court Views.

By the Associated Press.

The possibility of a split decision on litigation which Government counsel said involves constitutionality of the neutrality law was suggested yesterday during arguments before the Supreme Court.

The discussion was on the Government's appeal from a ruling by the Southern New York Federal District Court, which held that legislation which authorized an embargo on shipments to Bolivia and Paraguay during their recent war constituted an invalid delegation of legislative power to the Chief Executive.

During the argument of Martin Conboy, special assistant to the Attorney General, questions from the bench indicated divergent views.

Chief Justice Hughes leaned forward and asked if Congress throughout history had not granted to the President "a discretion in connection with the conduct of foreign affairs."

Raising his voice, the Chief Justice, who guided this country's foreign relations as Secretary of State under Presidents Harding and Coolidge inquired further:

"Has that ever been challenged in the history of this Government?"

"It has never been challenged until the present time," Conboy replied.

In turn, Justice McReynolds asked, apparently critically, if the legislation, intended to re-establish peace between the belligerent nations, required anything more than "a guess" by the President before an embargo was imposed.

"It requires a finding by the President that the embargo will aid in promoting peace," Conboy replied.

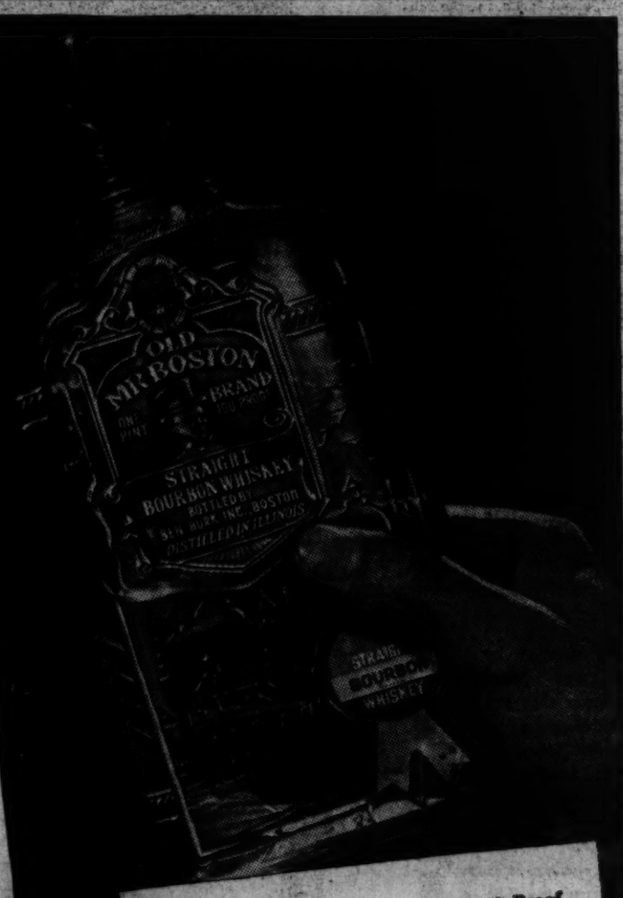
HOW TO GET EXTRA VALUE IN A STRAIGHT WHISKEY

A STANDARD measure of value in a straight whiskey is proof . . . the strength of the whiskey. Just as "100% wool," "100% pure silk" is the measure of good fabrics, so 100 proof is "tops" in straight whiskey value. Some folks think that a 100 proof straight whiskey just can't be as smooth, as mellow, as they like a whiskey to be. We believe . . . and its phenomenal sale certainly proves . . . that Old Mr. Boston Straight Whiskey is an exception . . . a 100 proof straight whiskey that is as smooth as any whiskey you ever tasted. That is why so many people now buy Old Mr. Boston 100 proof Straight Whiskey—not once but again and again.



Buy a bottle of Old Mr. Boston 100 Proof Straight Whiskey tonight. Taste a full, ripe flavor that lingers pleasantly without a trace of "bite" or harshness. Then recall how little you paid for this treat because of the extra value of full 100 proof.

Woman Guides Food to Market For 7 Millions

Keep It Moving, Slogan of New York Deputy Commissioner.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 19.—A beef train, its yellow refrigerator cars swaying around the bend, roars Eastward along the plains. A thousand miles away to the East, trucks on a dozen great highways chug through the night toward Manhattan. Along the waterfront ships of every land come pushing up the bay.

They're bringing food to the biggest collection of hungry people ever gathered in one small spot—New York City—in an enterprise so vast that nobody has any very exact idea of what it means every day, in tons or in dollars.

"Keep It Moving."

There are 7,000,000 persons to feed; 7,000,000 persons who couldn't eat long if that vast mobilization of rail, highway and water ever stopped. Nearly every State in the Union and countries from every quarter of the world contribute.

In a bare, small Manhattan office a brisk little woman told today something of the job it is to see to it that 7,000,000 New Yorkers get their foodstuffs fresh every day.

It is Mrs. Frances Foley Gannon's assignment to worry about eggs, butter, milk, fruits, vegetables, poultry and the like. She is deputy commissioner of markets in charge of the division of consumers service.

Her constant cry is "keep it moving!"

Authority Limited.

Her greatest fear comes when something goes wrong with the delicate, vast mechanism that brings it here and keeps it moving.

Her authority is somewhat limited—she isn't by any means a food "czar" and can't, for example, order in another hundred carloads of spinach, or stop a potato shipment at the city limits. But, anyhow, she has her methods.

Suppose she hears one day that cabbage is running low all over the city because of a flood in the South, a shipping difficulty, or any of half a dozen other reasons.

She goes on the radio and through it and the press tells the city's housewives that stringbeans are plentiful that day, mentions a little about their food value—and the cabbage incident is over before it really starts.

Daily, through these constant contacts with the public, she stands as a kind of pendulum-regulator between supply and demand.

Week's Supply on Hand.

Mrs. Gannon keeps a particularly sharp check on supplies on tap in refrigerators—she has to in a city that brings in, for instance, one and a quarter billion quarts of milk a year. The city maintains a big refrigerating plant against emergencies.

Some military experts have stressed the sharp vulnerability of a community that grows nothing to feed itself in the event of any great catastrophe of war or nature. Mrs. Gannon agrees with them to the extent, she said, that if every possible inlet should be bottled up simultaneously all perishable food would vanish within a week or ten days.

Prince Georges Police Records Checkup Starts

Accountants Compare Files With Drivers' Affidavits in Bonding Study.

The certified public accountants began yesterday to check Prince Georges County police records against motorists' affidavits as investigators began to compile their evidence for presentation to the Grand Jury, which will reconvene in early December for a "thorough" investigation of the alleged bonding racket.

The accountants were from the F. W. La Frantz Co. of Baltimore and The Keystone Automobile Club, of Washington.

State's Attorney Alan Bowie, who will present charges to the Grand jury, said he planned to concentrate first on the cases involved in the close to a hundred affidavits submitted to the automobile club by Washington motorists.

When this task is completed, he promised to search through the police "blotter" and court records for further evidence of "fixed" charges. He said his investigation would go back as far as September, 1935.

The evidence, it is believed, is sufficient to secure indictments against several members of the county police departments and at least one bondsman and a justice of the peace.

Hundreds of Washington motorists have claimed they were victimized in the alleged "bargain-fine" system through a collusion between police, justices of the peace and bondsmen.

Institute Denies 'Fixing' of Prices

By the Associated Press.

The Metal Window Institute, against which the Federal Trade Commission recently issued a complaint alleging price-fixing, said in a statement last night that trade practices mentioned by the commission had been "terminated after NRA was invalidated by the Supreme Court."

Through Ralph H. Sartor, commissioner of the Metal Window Institute, the organization said "a formal answer will be filed refuting all charges."

A charge that the industry through the Institute had artificially increased prices, the statement said, was "contradicted by the fact that the price of metal windows has steadily declined over a period of ten years, such decline being halted only to the extent made necessary by increased wages and increased cost of raw materials resulting from our code and the codes of the supplying industries."

Plane Model Meet Set for Tomorrow

The second half of the District Model Aircraft League tournament, to determine the District champion, will be held tomorrow at 9 a. m. in Constitution Hall with 35 entered.

Sponsored by the Playground Department, the contest began with the outdoor half November 7, which was held at Fort Myer. Points scored in both contests are counted equally.

John Ginnette, 20, of 1262 Holbrook terrace, holds a commanding lead in the ace class, with 15 points. Zell Steever, 19, of 2258 Cathedral avenue, is second, with 8 points.

D. C. Heads to Meet President's Group

The District Commissioners will meet and have their first conference with the members of the President's fiscal relations committee tomorrow at an executive parley in the Commercial National Bank Building.

The committee has heard both civic and trade organization spokesmen and department heads of the District government but the commissioners have not appeared at either session.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan will accompany the District heads and will submit some further statistical data in support of the District's request for a larger Federal contribution.

U. S. Aide Gives Clew; May End Loring Mystery

Valuable New Lead Hinted Last Link Needed to Obtain Indictment.

Information, which it is hoped will lead to an early "break" in the Corinna Loring murder mystery has been placed before investigators by a ranking Federal official, it was learned last night.

Lieut. Joseph Itzel, Baltimore detective in charge of the inquiry, conferred with this Federal official in a secretly arranged rendezvous in Southeast Washington Wednesday night, it was revealed.

The information obtained is considered so valuable that it is possible the year-old murder case may be presented to the grand jury when it convenes in special session to deal with the alleged bonding racket in Prince Georges County.

Investigators have promised to safeguard the source of their information with utmost secrecy, it was learned, because their informant held a responsible position and "was in it too deep."

A mysterious phone call to the Hyattsville Police Station Monday night, it was revealed, led to the uncovering of the new evidence.

The next day Lieut. Joseph Itzel and Sergt. Leo Vogelsang conferred with States Attorney Alan Bowie in Marlboro and Wednesday they talked to Richard Tear, the murdered girl's fiance, for more than two hours.

Itzel's trip to Washington took place after his talk with Tear. Appearance of Tear at Marlboro was entirely voluntary, investigators said.

Corinna Loring, Mount Rainier Sunday school teacher, disappeared from her home November 4, 1935, two days before she was to have been married to Tear, St. Elizabeths Hospital attendant. Five days later her mutilated body was found on Saddleback Ridge several blocks from her home. A noose of twine around her throat indicated she had been strangled to death.

Beyond Executive Discretion.

President Roosevelt has taken an impossible attitude toward the appointment of a people's counsel for the District to succeed William A. Roberts. Just before his departure for South America he told newspapermen that he was delaying the appointment because he is uncertain as to the advisability of maintaining such an official. That, of course, is beside the point. It is not the President's prerogative to decide whether the District shall or shall not have a people's counsel. The law provides that such an official "shall be appointed by the President," leaving him no choice in the matter.

If this job is to be abolished, the law must be changed by Congress and not by the White House. In the meantime, this vacancy and numerous other important positions, like that of Comptroller General, ought to be filled with as much dispatch as is commensurate with the selection of competent officials.

If and when Congress is asked to abolish the function of representing Washington consumers in cases before the Public Utilities Commission it will doubtless revert to the arguments it used in creating a people's counsel. The reasoning of the Senate report on this subject is just as cogent now as it was then:

> Without disparagement it may be stated that the Corporation Counsel of the District, who is now by law required to serve also as counsel for the Public Utilities Commission, is so fully occupied with the legal duties incident to every municipal government, including condemnation proceedings, police court prosecutions, tax suits, damage cases, etc., that he can not give utilities cases the attention they should have. No other class of litigation probably involves more highly technical evidence, more careful preparation, briefing, and presentation both originally and on appeal to the higher courts. It is for these reasons that the provisions for a people's counsel have been made.

A Long-Range Problem.

The address of Administrator Hopkins before the conference of mayors this week was a dignified and thoughtful defense of the WPA. As such it does much to dispel resentment hitherto aroused by Mr. Hopkins' habit of "wisecracking" at the expense of his critics. His forceful presentation of the magnitude of the task that confronts industry if it is to reabsorb millions of idle men and women cannot be waved aside with vaguely optimistic generalizations. It is a challenge to the best national thought, the more so since to Mr. Hopkins the facts prove the need for a permanent WPA.

The weakness of Mr. Hopkins' address lies in his method of approach to the unemployment problem. He assumes that the Government owes every man a job if he is not hired by private industry. So believing, the WPA Administrator naturally fails to consider accommodating his program to what the Nation can afford. He does not inquire whether either our political system or our economic organization is capable of indefinitely supporting the organization which he now heads.

This attitude would be justified if Mr Hopkins were merely discussing ways and means to keep the unemployed fed and clothed. That is clearly an obligation that must be discharged without counting the cost too closely. But national experience with the WPA has demonstrated that the Federal Government is not equipped to become the employer of every individual excluded from private industry. The burden of proof to the contrary rests on Mr. Hopkins. And he ducks it.

Mr. Hopkins also seems singularly ignorant of the limitations of the WPA as an agency for training young persons, and rehabilitating the older unemployed as mentally alert and competent workers. He fully appreciates the importance of training to prevent that shortage of skilled labor which is already retarding industrial expansion in some localities. But he has no constructive solution to propose for meeting this lack. Moreover, although he seems to have awakened to the need of accurate statistics of employment, he can only suggest taking periodic censuses of those unemployed—a negative kind of enumeration of a distinctly unsatisfactory character.

Now, as always, Mr. Hopkins seems to have a very inadequate appreciation of the way in which a nation-wide system of employment exchanges can be utilized to cut down the volume of unemployment by shifting workers from one district to another. He does not seem to realize that the Federal Employment Service is the logical agency for guiding and directing young people just entering employment, and possibly for supervising their apprenticeship. And like President Roosevelt, who on his departure again appealed to private employers to give a good share of jobs to older men and unskilled workers, Mr. Hopkins often seems to forget that industry has to be conducted efficiently if it is to survive.

To argue that inflexible prices create unemployment and at the same time to urge higher and more rigid labor costs for industry, is highly contradictory. Mr. Hopkins' heart is in the right place. He has the courage to face big issues as he sees them. But he still resolutely closes his eyes to many practical considerations that will have to be taken into account in developing the long-range relief program on which the Administration should now be concentrating.

Labor And The Law.

In his address before the A. F. of L. convention Maj. Berry expressed the belief that unless the Supreme Court changes its "present philosophy" and in the future favors "liberal legislation," a way will be found to meet the situation. He explained later in response to questions that it might be necessary to amend the Constitution or curb the powers of the Court if it should fail to "adjust itself to the mandate of the people."

Although Maj. Berry declared that he was not speaking for the Administration, his personal opinions inevitably carry the more weight since he is President Roosevelt's selection for the important position of Industrial Co-ordinator and will preside over the coming industrial conference. As this conference is to be devoted largely to discussion of labor problems and labor standards, Maj. Berry chooses an unfortunate moment to assume that liberalization of our labor laws necessarily entails changes in the Constitution or a reversal of Supreme Court decisions.

In taking this attitude, he will undoubtedly alienate those who sincerely believe that the Federal Government is not the proper agency to legislate for intrastate industries. Moreover, in thus insisting upon the indispensability of Federal action, he ignores the rapid progress that the States are making in liberalizing their own labor laws.

By a happy coincidence Secretary Perkins, who addressed the convention on the same day as Maj. Berry, placed especial emphasis upon the results achieved by cooperation between the United States Labor Department and local labor groups in developing State legislative programs. Since the spring of 1933, she pointed out, 13 States have legislated to reduce working hours, 9 have passed minimum wage laws, and 7 have established a 16-year minimum age limit for employment of boys and girls. State employment services, cooperating with the Federal Employment Service, are also being maintained in 42 States. This by no means exhausts the list of recent accomplishments but the evidence suffices to show that liberal labor legislation can be effectively forwarded by State action.

State co-operation to secure better and more uniform legislative protection for labor, in fact, offers a better basis for effective enforcement than laws imposed from without by the Federal Government, making inadequate allowances for local differences in economic conditions. Secretary Perkins' desire to hasten passage of the child labor amendment, already ratified by 24 States, does not commit her to advocacy of widespread federalization of regulatory labor laws. That amendment is directed against a specific form of exploitation; it is not designed to give the Federal Government the power to control employer-employe relationships in any other respect.

Secretary Perkins has not only stressed the importance of State co-operation in developing legislative programs. She has also wisely emphasized the responsibility of organized labor to aid in the formation and enforcement of labor laws. Her discussion outlined a practical program of action which many liberals will indorse more heartily because it showed that Federal intervention is not the sole alternative to interstate chaos in the field of labor legislation.

A New Bridge.

It was not so much the size of the new bridge across San Francisco's beautiful harbor which turned all eyes westward at its recent dedication; nor its enormous cost, whether computed in dollars or energy expended; nor any of its several other records. Probably it was the mystical, rather than any statistical, aspect of the 8-mile span which drew the country's attention. And this appeal it shares with many humbler structures.

For builders and bystanders alike, bridges hold a unique fascination. In all the catalogue of man's hammering, the grace and balance of a bridge are scarcely rivaled. Few structures, furthermore, are as satisfying to the pragmatic sense. And since the days of the Hellespont's baptism, bridges have been repositories for the memories of many of history's turning points.

Nor are these qualities lost to the casual user. How many Washingtonians give silent thanks for the beauty of the Memorial Bridge swinging its stately way across the Potomac? And how many fail to appreciate the easy efficiency of this and other local spans in connecting their homes with their work? Probably fewer reflect on the fact that the Potomac bridges might, but for certain turns of the cards, be today connecting two separate sovereignties.

Twenty-four lives were lost in the building of the bridge now linking Oakland with San Francisco. This was a heavy toll, but on their memorial it may be carved that they died gallantly. There are many more futile deaths than those which attend man's age-old struggle to cross where nature would prevent his passage.

A Welcome Addition.

The installation of a new head is always important for a university. To a degree perhaps unparalleled in other organizations, the director of an educational institution can in no small measure make or break it. From this point of view, the Catholic University of America is to be congratulated on its new rector, the Right Rev. Joseph Moran Corrigan. A man of fine culture and a gifted administrator, clearly demonstrated when he was rector of St. Charles Seminary and by his efforts in promoting the retreat movement of his faith, Bishop Corrigan is a welcome addition to the circle of Washington's educational leaders.

In his inaugural address Wednesday, he demonstrated a scholarship and a vision that promises well for the institution he now directs. What is more important, he exhibited a nice sense of proportion—a quality without which no leader, least of all the head of a great university, can hope to succeed. This was brought out in his tempered explanation of the godlessness of communism. It followed, he submitted, from the world's growing habit of depending on physical force for fancied solution of its problems. And his bow to Bishop Ryan had more than grace to it: in acknowledging the achievements of his predecessor, he showed himself to be an educator of similar ideals and, for the university and Washington as well, there could be no higher recommendation for an incoming rector.

Hope For The "Untouchables."

Once more the "little fellow" is championed, this time in India. A powerful blow to the ancient caste system has been struck with the announcement in the Province of Travancore that considerations of "birth, caste or community" shall no longer exclude any one from a state temple. This proclamation, which is presumed to be only a beginning toward the complete emancipation of the "untouchables," is expected to have repercussions throughout India where 40,000,000 persons live in social bondage in accordance with the strictures of Hindu law.

In part, the British may be credited with this trend toward relaxation of caste lines. Their Christianity together with their Occidental conceptions of democracy, both political and social, has dripped slowly upon the rock of the Indian caste system and now at last significant cracks are apparent. But the greater share of acclaim must go to the maharajah who signed the proclamation. In the first reports from Madras he is merely described as being 24 years old. To the western world and particularly the United States, where popular novelists are practically the sole purveyors of information on India, this is not enough.

A fuller picture of the Maharajah of Travancore is wanted. What is his background and personality? Is he Hindu or Christian? What contact has he had with the Occident? Was he schooled in India or, perhaps, in England? In sum, can the emancipation of the "untouchables" be ascribed to the action of the pulsing culture of the West on the stagnant traditions of the East? Or was it ordered spontaneously from within Hinduism which saw itself in danger of serious disintegration without some adjustment to relieve the pressure brewing among the undertrodden masses?

By Appointment H. R. H.

Men like to look down their noses at feminine fashions. Each new fad is assured of a good masculine horse-laugh. Prewar flappers in crushed felt hats, flying scarves and comfortable brogans were ridiculed by the opposite sex. Last winter debutantes let themselves in for a lot of bantering by wearing dinner suits very like those of their male escorts. Yet in each case women were simply adopting styles which men had approved and worn for years. So it will be interesting to see what John Doe thinks of the new dresses and hats. For they were not only inspired by a man but the male whom all others look upon as the last word in trick togs—King Edward of England!

Hollywood contends it has only to say "presto" and a vogue is created. Paris claims it is the last word in fashion. But it really begins to look as if conservative England will have something to say about this. Two years ago "Marina turbans" and "Marina coiffures" flooded the market. And now, because Edward took a Dalmatian tour, women this winter are doomed to look like combinations of parading Shriners and comic opera characters. Peasant embroidery, pill-box hats with long tassels, and Dubrovnik blouses have invaded our shore and show-windows.

Maybe the King can do no wrong. But we'd rather reserve our opinion until we see a lady decked out in a "Zivio" cap and an evening "yelek."

"Nudists complain of being confined to restricted areas." All undressed up and nowhere to go.

"Because I've never fallen in love, I have lived 120 years," declares a Latin-American woman. Lived?

Lightly Penned Letters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This morning's perusal of your entertaining, stimulating and thought-provoking journal convinces me that there are a number of undiscovered humorists in Washington and environs. Infrequently have I remarked so great a proportion of the salt of wit in a "Letters to the Editor" department. I think that is an augury of better and happier times when correspondents drop the weightier problems of the day and indulge in a little gentle spoofing. What this country needs (Series 23456B) is more fun, particularly in print.

Many a true word is spoken in jest, and there is hardly a problem, of whatever moment, which cannot be made more palatable and comprehensible to the populace by the free exchange of opinions upon it, particularly those containing wit. Wit, as defined by our good friend, Noah Webster, is mind, intellect, understanding, sense. It is a mental faculty or power. It is the felicitous perception or expression of associations between ideas or words not usually connected such as to produce an amusing surprise, also, power of such perception or expression. Wit is more purely intellectual than humor, and implies swift perception of the incongruous; it depends for its effect chiefly on ingenuity or unexpectedness of turn, or patness of application. Humor implies, commonly, broader human sympathies than wit, and a more kindly sense of the incongruous, often blended with pathos.

One significant thing about the political orators in the recent campaign was that those who employed wit in their discourses were more avidly listened to than those who relied upon statistics and the sometime dullness of logic and argument. I never knew of anyone, whatever his political predilictions, preferences or predicaments, who didn't enjoy a speech by "Al" Smith and the same holds true of Gen. Johnson, Harold Ickes and other gifted orators of this type. I am happy to see the letter writers going in for this sort of thing.

More On The Spanish Scene

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have noticed a communication in The Post of November 16 over the signature of Vincent O'Connor.

Senor Bernardo Ponce is a competent and fair observer. Writing from the scene of the conflict in Spain, he covers some of the points raised in the controversy between Vincent O'Connor and the Rev. Urban Adelman. I offer it to your readers in translation.

Referring to the elections of last February, by which the present government of Spain came into office, Mr. Ponce says that, in spite of an atmosphere of violence, the elections took place without incident and resulted in victory for the Popular Front.

He adds, however, "It is of primary importance, in attempting to explain events which followed that election, to take into consideration the fact that the parliamentary majority does not represent a majority of the people of Spain.

"This is true because the elections were conducted under the same defective election law as that under which the elections of 1933 were held and which was passed by the Leftist majority of the constitutional Cortes. This law provides for a regime of majorities and minorities only in the big cities and makes no provision for proportional representation. This explains how, as the result of the elections of 1933, the Rightists had a majority in the Parliament, in spite of the fact that a majority of the popular vote had been cast for the Leftists. It also explains how, in 1936 the Popular Front won a parliamentary majority in spite of the fact that a majority of the total popular vote favored the Right.

"To this one must add the further consideration that a large number of Catholics, conservatives or moderates, voted for the Popular Front, doing so only because the Popular Front had pledged itself to enact statutes granting regional autonomy to certain Separatist provinces, like Catalonia, the Basque provinces and Galicia. The fact that they voted for the Leftists does not indicate that they gave their approval to the social and political doctrines of the parties which made up the Popular Front. As a result I can say without hesitation that the forces lined up on one and the other side are numerically just about equal. The election shows the irreducible division of Spaniards that was about to enter into conflict. The result of this situation could be none other than that the majority in the Cortes would proceed to legislate and govern for itself and against the other half of the country.

"Spaniards have no notion of political give and take, which is so necessary, especially in a democratic parliamentary regime. In 1933 the Center-Right government wiped out everything that had been done by the preceding Socialist-Republican government, and in October, 1934, revolution broke out in Asturias and Catalonia . . . In 1936 the Popular Front government in turn wiped out all that had been done by the preceding government, and in July a military movement broke out and, according to their leaders, it was a movement of defense of the republic, which was endangered by the acts of Extremists and the ultimate purpose of which was to restore peace and social order."

The best advice that has been given to the Spanish republic is that given by the venerable Archbishop of Tarragona, who, in my estimation, is the outstanding champion of democracy in the entire history of the Spanish republic. When the newly elected Cortes met in 1931 to draft a constitution for the Spanish republic, Cardinal Vidal addressed to them a memorial in which he spoke for the Catholics of Catalonia and all his entire archdiocese.

"You have been commissioned," he told the Cortes, "by the people of Spain to construct a new political structure for the nation. We cherish the hope that when you have completed your labors you will have erected a political system that will be firm, strong and broad, so that within it every Spaniard may find a dwelling where he may live with every other Spaniard. In that structure there must be space to contain the whole nation with all its groups and classes, with justice and discipline, but with liberty and order."

The constitutional Cortes ignored the sound advice of Cardinal Vidal and today Spain is paying the penalty of that denial.

Through personal contact with many Spaniards of all social classes I am convinced that in Spain there are statesmen or high ideals of patriotism and justice. These men have been crushed under the republic by the violence of extremists and today the future of Spain is no longer in their hands. For us, the most important of all is that we view with unbiased objectivity what is happening in Spain, contributing thus to a better understanding of a problem, the magnitude and importance of which many seem not to understand. Spain is struggling up-hill toward representative democracy. Under visionary leadership divorced from national realities, that struggle leads only to disaster. Perhaps tomorrow, chastened by the crucifixion she is enduring, humiliated by the misery of an unnecessary war, wiser leadership will arise under which reality will be given to the hope of that venerable liberal, the Cardinal Archbishop of Tarragona.

Biblical Forecasts Of War.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter by C. A. M. Wells in the issue of Sunday, November 15, concerning the coming of peace on earth was very enlightening, but it did not go far enough. Mr. Wells repeatedly declared that peace would come "in God's way and in God's appointed time," and no doubt many readers were anxious to learn just what would be "God's way and God's appointed time." The Bible makes both clear.

There are numerous texts in the Bible that reveal clearly that the earth in its present condition—its distress, poverty, lawlessness, greed, political trickery, merciless and barbaric murder under the name of war, the piling up of riches at the expense of the unfortunate, and all the other evils that contribute to the misery and woe of the human race in general, is to be refined and purified by fire just as certainly as it was once destroyed by water, and no man, or set of men, or nations will be able to prevent it.

The apostle Peter speaks specifically of one of the greatest evidences we have in the world today that that day is approaching when fire shall be used in a world-wide cleansing process, as follows: "There shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation." He further declares with emphasis that "The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up." (Verse 10.)

It is true, as Mr. Wells says, that the Battle of Armageddon is to be fought, and a study of Revelation 16, in which the Armageddon conflict is mentioned, reveals the stupendous fact that seven fearful plagues are prophesied to come upon the earth in the closing days of history. The Armageddon battle is to be fought during the sixth plague, with all nations involved. Who knows but that the nations of the world, with more men under arms today than were in the combined armies of the nations in what we call the World War, are rapidly getting ready for that conflict? The apostle Paul says that "the day of the Lord cometh as a thief in the night. For when they shall say, Peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them . . . and they shall not escape." (I Thess. v:2,3.)

We are hearing a plenty about peace and safety, with governments sending representatives to meet in international conferences in different sections of the world, and while all such gatherings are laudable and to be encouraged, yet the good book assures us that only the Great Lawgiver and Peace Advocate himself will bring deliverance in permanent form. "There is no peace, saith the Lord unto the wicked." (Isa. 48:22.) With great nations swallowing up other nations with the aid of aerial bombs that destroy the innocent people by the multitudes, and with the aid of other implements of destruction, with but a mere word of protest from other nations, which means nothing to the grasping, greedy armies of the conquerors, how can there be any peace?

The prophet Isaiah declares that "the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt." (Chapter 57, verse 20.) And with wickedness prevailing in the hearts of individuals and also in the plans of nations that are reaching out for new empires and taking them through much bloodshed when they meet with resistance on the part of those who are forced to yield to their conquerors, surely the doings of the wicked can be likened to nothing less than the troubled sea that casts up mire and dirt.

Eyes And Cosmetics

INDISCRIMINATE use of weight-reducers, hair dyes and depilatories is causing serious injury to eyesight in the United States, according to a warning by Dr. Walter I. Lillie in the current issue of "The Sight-Saving Review," quarterly journal of the National Society for Prevention of Blindness.

Case stories of eye tragedies among his patients are cited by Dr. Lillie, and he gives the trade names of the "beauty products" which the victims used. Dr. Lillie is a practicing ophthalmologist in Philadelphia, and a member of the department of ophthalmology of the Temple University School of Medicine there. Writing on "Cosmetics Detrimental to Vision," he says:

"Individuals who use cosmetics are unwittingly subjecting themselves to visual dangers. We are all potential victims, because the present antiquated food and drug act, passed in 1906, only requires the manufacturers of food and drugs to properly label their products but does not penalize the acts of adulteration and misbranding. False and fraudulent therapeutic claims must be proven before the product can be removed from the market.

"These two little words 'and fraudulent' compel the Government to prove that the manufacturer knows the customer is being swindled. This has prevented any adequate control over quack or dangerous remedies. Extraneous advertising of these products through the newspapers, magazines and radio is without Federal control, and because of this we are constantly reminded of the wonderful benefits and cures that will be derived from their use.

"Today the $1,000,000,000-a-year cosmetic industry is not subject to any Federal regulations unless the labels bear medicinal claims, which of course, never occurs. There is no legal way to protect the public against dangerous cosmetics. Toilet preparations which are known to be harmful by the medical profession cannot be taken off the market regardless of any disfigurement or injury they may inflict. Although poisonous cosmetics that ravage their users by paralyzing, blinding or disfiguring them are the exception rather than the rule, the medical profession should be alert to the possibilities and probabilities of visual and bodily damage which may result from their use.

"The untoward visual effects may be temporary or permanent, depending upon the nature of the ingredient or the amount used, and the tolerance of the individual. The eyes are usually affected in one of two ways, either through direct contact with the preparation or indirectly through the absorption of the poisonous ingredient in the body. Three groups of cosmetics have the potentiality of producing severe ocular damage, namely: (1) weight reducing preparations, (2) hair dyes, and (3) depilatory ointments.

"The present Administration has asked for a new food and drug act which will give consumers better protection than the present antiquated pure food law affords. The officials of the Department of Agriculture have drafted the Copeland bill (erroneously called the Tugwell bill), which is proposed in the interest of the public and the honest manufacturer. This act is to afford Federal control of the manufacturing, labeling, selling, advertising and shipping of prepared foods, drugs and cosmetics.

"This bill is actively supported by the American Medical Association, American Federation of Labor, the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and eleven other national women's organizations. A powerful opposition lobby has been organized and is sponsored by the Proprietary Association of America and numerous allied groups. Their apparent aim is to keep the present inadequate Federal regulations unchanged, and so far their efforts have delayed constructive legislative action.

"A new law must be passed to insure the public of a deserved protection. We as individuals and as members of medical organizations should put forth every effort to obtain adequate legislation against the promiscuous sale and use of poisonous foods, drugs and cosmetics."

Movies Turn To New Subjects.

Haltingly, half-consciously, the movies have discovered new fields. Fifteen years ago when I would suggest biographical or historical feature films, I would be told that the movies had to have stories and the stories had to be love stories. (The success of the gangster cycle of films a few years ago put an end to the last of these illusions.) The movies still make fiction of the lives of Pasteur and Florence Nightingale and Dr. Mudd, of Shark Island; there are half a dozen eminent biographers who do the same thing with their subjects.

The significant event is the appearance of the character of human beings as the prime element in pictures, and this event, if I am not mistaken, can be traced back to the activities of the boycotters who in 1934 became a serious menace to the prosperity of Hollywood.

Far too many books are published for their immediate sensation, but the great publishing houses do not live by these, nor by the windfall of best-sellers; they have a backlog of books which sell steadily from year to year, and are constantly adding to that list.

It is to the solid and permanent foundation of the publishing business, and not to the accidental and haphazard situation of the theater, that the movies should look for a guide in their own perplexities.

Newspaper Plants.

SOMETHING has reminded me of Mr. Roosevelt's remark about firetrap newspaper plants that day early in his reign when Bert McCormick, the head man of the Chicago Tribune, needled him about some proposition in the New Deal and made him sore. And that reminds me that although we used to have some great fires waiting for the match around the country, Mr. Roosevelt was badly out of line and out of date, because we are really very sumptuous nowadays and much better off in regard to the fire hazard than the President of the United States in the White House.

But, even though some of the old-time plants were highly inflammable, the only disastrous newspaper fire that I ever heard of occurred in Minneapolis before I was in circulation. It was either the Tribune or the Journal which burned, and several men on the editorial side lost their lives, one of them dropping into the alley as he tried to cross by hand between the buildings.

The Los Angeles Times disaster hardly counts as a fire, because that was a dynamite job, although the same amount of dynamite would barely scuff the paint in some of the big newspaper buildings of the present day.

• • • •

WE HAD a pretty big fire in the old World building one evening ten or twelve years ago, but fire engines were just ordinary traffic outside our windows, and nobody paid much attention for an hour or so. The fire was shooting up the elevator shafts, and staff members upstairs were driven out, but down on the third floor nobody realized how bad the fire had been until it was over, and the United Press wires were not interrupted.

The old Hearst plant was a bad risk and the Mail, Globe and Daily News shops were not much better, but nowadays most newspaper offices are all stone, concrete and steel, even to the desks in some cases, and Mr. Roosevelt's description goes to show that there is at least one subject which he doesn't know about, or didn't when he overspoke himself.

He probably was thinking of ancient buildings, such as the dreadful old "goats' nest" in which the Chicago Daily News was published in Victor Lawson's day and the Chicago American plant of Mr. Hearst's early days in town.

They used to keep barrels of benzine and collodion in the cellar of the American plant, and the sound of the bells and the big, clattering horses in the street outside was extremely personal to people working upstairs in that rickety old crate. But, though they did have fires occasionally, the firemen would dive right in and slap them down, and the explosion never did come off somehow.

• • • •

THEN Mr. Hearst put up a big plant of his own with Cupids and cornucopias and forget-me-nots done in colored plaster around the outside, and the ink-stained wretches of the Fourth Estate called it the Wedding-Cake Building and said Nell Brinkley had designed it.

A peculiarity of the old-time firetrap newspaper office which Mr. Roosevelt had in mind were the enormous cockroaches which infested all of them. I disremember why these imposing brutes were attracted to newspaper plants. They lived on ink, I believe, or maybe it was the flavor of the copy paper or the paste on the copy desk, or possibly the editorial policy, but whatever their diet they thrived prodigiously, and a fairly well-developed yearling could be broken to saddle.

You don't see them around the new shops and the office cat, another old newspaper institution, is disappearing now, although generally there are a couple around the New York Times. The telephone girls and the night watchmen usually fed the office cat a little milk in a dusty saucer, but his, or her, principal fare was mice.

• • • •

THE MECHANICAL equipment is really very special these days, but I remember a case in Dallas in which the machinery got in its own way, with the result that the Dallas Journal, a pioneer in the matter of magnificent plants, with an office lawyer to comb every line of copy for libel under the touchy Texas laws, was beaten to the street with the flash on the loss of Lord Kitchener in the British cruiser Hampshire.

The old Dallas Dispatch was either very poor or a nonspender and got along with a few hatfuls of type, a couple of old typewriters and the zeal of a fat city editor named Murphy, who did everything, but sell the paper on the corners. But, though the Journal had an advantage of 15 minutes on the flash, the Journal's great, complicated gears were just beginning to grind when the newsboys went howling past the office with Mr. Murphy's Dallas Dispatch. He just dumped some type in a form, ran a page through and kicked his paper out while the Journal's libel lawyer, I suppose, was looking up the law to see whether you could libel the British Empire in saying Kitchener was dead.

My goodness, were we embarrassed around the Journal with all our gadgets and planned efficiency, as pretty and clean as a model dairy, when Mr. Murphy's noisy brats started howling "Extra!" around our door!

I don't seem able to end this. Maybe if I just leave the typewriter it will stop.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Imaginary Interviews—Larry Kelley.

Q.—Mr. Kelley, are you any relation to Shipwreck Kelley, the flagpole climber?

A.—No; I'm the one that can go that high without the pole and come down faster with what I went up for.

• • • •

Q.—Do you like football, Mr. Kelley?

A.—Yes, and all other branches of aviation.

Q.—Football has nothing to do with aviation, has it?

A.—If it hasn't, I've been using the wrong technique all these years.

Q.—In selecting your alma mater why did you pick Yale?

A.—It was largely sympathy.

Q.—Sympathy?

A.—Yes, I had been following some of those Yale elevens and reading the scores.

Q.—You wanted to play the Good Samaritan?

A.—I didn't even know he was on their schedule. I just thought that the team could use a little help.

Q.—What do you think of Princeton?

A.—They're like the Literary Digest Poll; they look convincing until the final results come in.

Q.—What were your reactions when Princeton rolled up 16 points in the first few minutes of the game?

A.—I remember thinking that if the gasoline sponsor was going to get his money's worth we had better stop kidding around and settle down to business.

Q.—Weren't the rest of the boys discouraged?

A.—Certainly not. We have a swell drama department at Yale and every man on the team knew the big question is: "How is your second act?"

Q.—But after you had forged ahead only to have Princeton take the lead again weren't you depressed at all?

A.—No, I knew there was one man on the team Yale could depend on.

Q.—Who was it?

A.—Kelley.

Q.—Are you serious?

A.—Only between whistles.

Q.—How do you feel about the Harvard game?

A.—I never cross my ambridges until I come to 'em.

Q.—They say the Crimson eleven is a real threat.

A.—That's what they said about Landon.

Q.—One rumor is that six men will play you at every stage of the game.

A.—I can't help it if they underestimate me, can I?

Q.—How do you manage to make so many catches with the tips of your fingers?

A.—In nailing those high ones I like to use plenty of nails.

Q.—Is that joke worthy of Yale?

A.—Well, Billy Phelps has become famous on worse ones.

Report From Prague

Correspondent Finds Czechslovakia Only Succession State To Have Maintained Effective Democratic Government.

By S. Miles Bouton.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Prague.

THE GODFATHERS of the Succession States, who stood beside the baptismal font and saw their godchildren enter life in a world presumably made safe for democracy, have every right to feel sick as they contemplate the subsequent careers of their young hopefuls. These have turned every one to his own way and the transgression of dictatorship is on almost all of them.

The Baltic states, the Balkan states—wherever one turns the same picture of democracy either dead or apparently dying. Finland, a republic professing democratic principles, and in general with justification, does not permit communists to present candidates for parliament or to have any part in government. Poland is nominally a republic and pays lip-service to democracy; actually it is a latent dictatorship, that is, the people may rule unless the men at the head of the government decide differently from time to time. More plainly put, if Gen. Rydz-Smigly, legatee of Pilsudski's political testament, wants something done, it is done. The president of the republic, a distinguished international scientist, is a figurehead.

But one godchild, still less than 18 years old, has in large measure justified the hopes rested on it. This is Czechoslovakia, among whose godfathers America was so prominent that Prague's chief railway station is the Wilson Station, a splendid bronze portrait-bust of the late President stands in the entrance of the Wilson Hotel, and the hotel is situated in Hoover street.

In no other succession state except Finland—and even there, as noted above, a part of the population is denied any voice in the state's affairs—is there a so genuine belief in the fundamental principles of democracy as in Czechoslovakia, and in no other have these principles been so faithfully defended and put into execution. This is the more worthy of acknowledgment because of the existence of racial minorities.

Slovaks Under Hlinks Demand Their Autonomy.

THE SLOVAKS, closely related to the Czechs, have from the creation of the state been demanding autonomy. They are well represented in the Parliament, they cooperate loyally in the government, and, while they maintain the demand for autonomy as the chief point in their platform, this, one is assured, is very largely, kept alive by their leader, Pater Andre Hlinka, a priest who headed that movement under the Austro-Hungarian monarchy and cannot easily adjust himself to the new state of affairs. The Slovaks are represented in the government coalition and also in the cabinet.

Members of the bicameral parliament—House of Deputies and Senate—are elected by secret vote of both men and women, who must be 21 years old to vote for deputies to the lower house and 26 to vote for senators. A unique feature is the compulsion to vote; non-voters can be fined unless they present a valid reason for their abstention.

But Czechoslovak democracy, genuine as it is, is what the men in power call "authoritarian democracy." The Parliament has wide powers, it can override the President's veto, and in the final analysis no measure could be carried out against its will. There can thus be no talk of a masked dictatorship here. But the government can and does on occassion prohibit newspapers, political meetings, parades, etc., when it feels that the state's interests are menaced. This power is at times unwisely employed. A whole issue of the Sudete Germans' chief newspaper was confiscated recently because of a seven-line item reporting that the homes of some suspected Germans had been searched by gendarmes.

All this, of course, consorts badly with American and British conceptions of democracy, but the situation in Czechoslovakia is one which America has never had to face. We have no racial minorities in the real sense of the phrase, for our foreign-born population came of its own free will; it was not handed over to a new allegiance like so many chattels or pieces of territory. Nor has any attempt ever been made in America to destroy these elements' language, customs or literature.

Czech Minorities Found Well Treated.

IT IS DIFFERENT almost everywhere on the Continent, where but few countries have been politically wise enough to abstain from oppression against minorities. Czechoslovakia also offended in the first few years of its existence, and mistakes are occasionally made still, but on the whole it has a highly creditable record. Of no less than 22 complaints laid before the League of Nations by the Sudete Germans, not one has been found justified. The German Social-Democrats and the German Agrarian Party are both represented in the cabinet.

An encouraging factor of the situation is that both the Czechoslovak Social-Democrats and the German Social-Democrats follow a national policy, resembling in this respect the Swedish Marxists. The Czech Marxists have abandoned the class-warfare idea, while, of course, working to improve the condition of the working class and lower employes. They have also abandoned the collectivist idea, and have gained marked success in the eight-hour day, old-age insurance and various social reforms.

The German Social-Democrats could not for several years after 1918 bring themselves to loyal cooperation with the new state. Convinced gradually of the good will of the dominant elements in the state, they left the opposition in 1929, and have had a representative in each of the six cabinets since. They have 11 deputies in the lower House of Parliament. The German Agrarians have 5 and the German Christian Socialist Party 6, a total German representation of 22, against 44 for the Sudete Germans—a proportion which corresponds almost exactly to the relative popular vote among all Germans, of which the Sudetes polled 6 per cent last year.

The other radical minorities—Poles, Magyars, Ruthenians and Jews—cause no trouble. Czechoslovakia—another entry on the credit side of its ledger—has no anti-Semitism, except, of course, among the Sudete Germans whose eyes are constantly turned toward Hitler's Third Reich.

"Our situation is already complicated enough," said a government official when asked about this. "To complicate it further by anti-Semitism would be plain madness."

THE VISITOR who sees only Prague—and especially so if he comes from Poland—cannot but get the impression of great prosperity. The streets, clean as the streets of a German city, are full of new autos, the shop windows' display is alluring, the people are well dressed. But behind all is the specter of unemployment—some 800,000 in a population of a scant 15,000,000. Hard hit by the depression, Czechoslovakia is gaining ground very slowly. Textiles, glass, porcelain, leading export industries, all suffered greatly. At a meeting of porcelain manufacturers this week it was reported that the total turnover in the first half of 1936 was less than 15 per cent of the figure for the first half of 1929, and only about 60 per cent of that for the corresponding period last year. Japanese and German dumping, the latter with the help of export subsidies, explains the situation.

Despite their own troubles the Czechoslovaks have had to give refuge to a large number of refugees from Germany — Socialists, Jews, democrats and others. There are some 2,500 here now, and they keep coming as Hitler's measures against all real or fancied opposition becomes more drastic. The Socialists-Democrats here do what they can for their comrades from Germany, the Czech Jews have responded nobly, but the burden on a small and poor country is heavy.

The refugees report — and are borne out from other sources—that opposition to the Nazi regime is increasing day by day. But there is no leadership, no rallying point, and the opponents cannot work together. Even today the German Socialist and the German Communist refugees carry on their undermining work separately.

Despite the composite make-up of this young republic's population, one gets an impression of unity except as to the 67 per cent (some 1,300,000) of the Sudete Germans. And one finds also a marked pride in the fact that Dr. Edward Benes, the President, is generally regarded now as Europe's ablest statesman.

A British View

Of The Election Results.

Mr. Roosevelt's Triumph.

Following is the conclusion of an editorial appearing in the London Economist for November 7:

AFTER TUESDAY'S (November 3) vote is is no more than a recognition of simple fact to say that Mr. Roosevelt is the most popular President that America has known, certainly since the Civil War, and probably since the Revolution. What are the reasons for this abounding popularity? The policies of the New Deal were surveyed in some detail in a supplement to the Economist of October 3, and though the final judgment then pronounced was more favorable than adverse, nobody could claim that the policies of the New Deal have been either uniformly successful or uniformly popular. Why, then, has the American electorate so enthusiastically indorsed the President who conceived and executed these policies?

One reason can be found in the contrast between the condition of the country in March, 1933, and its state of rapidly returning prosperity today. Post hoc ergo propter hoc is a logical fallacy, but perhaps for that precise reason it is a sound political principle.

A second reason can be found in the personality of the President himself. He is all that a successful politician should be. His campaign smile, his radio technique, his phrase-making gift, his surpassing abilities as a charmer, his rarely failing instinct for what will appeal to the plain man, even his choice of enemies—all have helped him.

Another powerful factor in his favor has been the fact that many millions of voters have been directly assisted by his policies, even apart from the indirect benefit to them of the general revival in trade, which he may or may not have promoted. The Democratic Party organization has not failed to remind the beneficiaries of relief and of "agricultural adjustment" that they owe their cash receipts to the policies of a Democratic President and a Democratic Congress. In some districts this steady flow of cash has been used for more than the cultivation of gratitude and has served to irrigate the parched coffers of the Democratic "machine" itself.

NEITHER particular benefit nor general recovery nor personal charm, however, is sufficient—nor are all three in combination—to explain such an overwhelming victory. There is obviously something about the New Deal which has fired the imagination of the country. One does not need to search very far to find this inner element of Mr. Roosevelt's strength. On the day of his inauguration he promised "Action, and Action now," and ever since he has contrived to give the impression that he was leading a democracy on the march. The march has, it is true, led into more than one cul-de-sac, from which direct retreat has been necessary. But always the American democracy, under Mr. Roosevelt's leadership, has been on the move, always the voter could consider himself one of an army continually striving to combat privilege, to relieve misery and to establish "the abundant life." Mr. Roosevelt has caught a little of the spirit which, in other countries, has been distorted and debased into fascism.

The moral of his triumphant re-election—and it is a moral that all democratic countries, Great Britain not least, should take to heart—is that the people will forgive the bold experimentalist his occasional errors in gratitude for his strenuous good intentions. They will never tolerate the cautious pedant who waits before moving to be sure that every last detail of his plan is approved by the orthodox, and consequently seems never to move at all. Mr. Hoover may or may not be the better economist, but, in any case, it is not he who can rally the multitude and organize the democracy. And since politics is the art of the possible, not the science of the ideal, it is the Roosevelts who, with all their faults and inconsistencies, become, and deserve to become, the great statesmen.

THE FULL CONSEQUENCES that will flow from this week's vote cannot yet be predicted. They depend, in very large measure, on the conclusions which Mr. Roosevelt himself will draw from the unprecedented vote of confidence he has been given. The victory is so complete that he would be justified in proceeding even with those parts of his programme which have been thought to be unpopular. A continuance of relief in its present form, of agricultural adjustment, or social security, of public utility regulation can all be confidently predicted. A revival of experiments such as the NRA is not improbable. Mr. Roosevelt may even feel himself strong enough to tackle the problem of the Constitution itself in order to break out of the sterile dilemma in which recent decisions of the Supreme Court have placed the Federal Government. Proceeding to still bolder flights of imagination, it is even conceivable that he may venture to act upon the belief that a great Nation such as the United States should have a foreign policy.

Equally interesting, and equally speculative, are the probable effects of the election, not upon policy, but upon politics. When one party has had a majority in American elections in the past, it has always been because it has been able to build up a larger coalition of States than its rival. Other Presidents in the past have received as large a proportion of the popular vote as Mr. Roosevelt (Harding in 1920, for instance, received over 60 per cent), but they have always had to face large geographical minorities. Mr. Roosevelt, however, gets his majority in 46 States and almost sweeps the board of the Electoral College. This can only mean one thing—that the old geographical basis of the parties is breaking down and being replaced by a division of politics or interests. The Democrats are becoming, under Mr. Roosevelt's lead, the party of the Left; the Republicans, in spite of Mr. Landon's "liberalism," the party of the Right. Where this new alignment of parties will lead American politics, we can as yet only dimly foresee.

Bankers See Budget Balance As First Essential to Security

Large Proportion of Bank Assets Tied Up in Long-Term Government Bonds Due to Emergency Financing; Increase Might Hurt Credit.

By James McConaughy.

During his campaign the President declared for a balanced budget in the next two or three years, and his secretary is substantiated by his recent lengthy conferences with Acting Director of the Budget Daniel W. Bell. But a balanced budget is no longer merely a desirable accouterment of sound Government; in the eyes of many bankers it is the key to the future security of the country's banks.

For seven lean years financiers have been eying the fiscal policy of the government with more than academic interest. As the Treasury's best customer for bonds and shorter-term securities, they have watched the rising tide of public indebtedness.

In September they heard the Treasury's announcement for refinancing maturing bills and notes with new bond issues, and realized it meant more of their assets would be tied up for long periods. And now they are watching for the White House announcement that may spell full security for the country's more than 14,000 banks—a balanced budget and an end to emergency spending.

Banks Absorb Debt.

Since early in the depression banks have been absorbing an unprecedented amount of the public debt. On June 30, the figure for 14,059 members of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was above twelve and a half billion dollars, nearly half of which was in low interest bonds. Secretary Morgenthau's announced intention of converting maturing bills and notes into long term bonds will raise the proportion of bonds to total government obligations well above 50 per cent.

But bankers are inclined to look at the future with a new optimism. That optimism is based on hope for a balanced budget in the immediate future. Continued spending in excess of revenue will spell disaster, they believe.

The figures of bank holdings in recent years emphasize the gravity of the situation. In the last two years insured by the FDIC have increased their holdings of direct government obligations from 9.7 billions to 12.5. Through last December the proportion held in long term securities was gradually declining, but in June the figure showed a decided increase. Apparently a further increase can be expected, according to the Treasury's September announcement.

Heavy Cash Balances.

In spite of so large a proportion of their assets being tied up more or less permanently, bankers are consoled by heavy cash balances. On June 30, banks insured by the FDIC reported cash balances totalling $14,000,000,000. This should be more than enough to take care of any immediate demands of private industry.

Even if the needs of private industry reach unexpected heights, the bankers are not seriously worried. They do not expect to need additional reserves for new loans. They point to the effects of the Government's spending program and private industry's accumulated surpluses as evidences that no new large-scale private financing is impending. If new capital should be needed, they point to Government agencies—the Social Security Board and its huge fund in particular—as markets for their stores of Government securities.

But this optimism is predicated on a balanced budget in the immediate future. Half rationalizing and half reasoning, they point to the new and heavier taxes as additional sources of revenue to finance the Government's program. But most of all they pin their hopes on the President's campaign and "non-political" statements envisioning no further increase in National debt.

Balance Held Essential.

Without a balanced ledger, bankers are definitely worried over the future. Of necessity, they will be forced into buying any new bond issues. The alternative is a decline in the Government's credit, and a popular suspicion of Government securities. And such a condition would be serious to the 12 billions of resources the banks now hold.

Additional Government bond issues of any considerable size, they point out, would mean private industry would be forced to offer higher interest rates for capital. And such a rise in general interest rates would mean an inevitable depreciation of the Government's low-interest-bearing securities.

That the banks cannot safely continue to absorb large quantities of Government securities is obvious. Third-quarter statements of 15 leading New York City banks showed a decline in the proportion of assets tied up in Government securities. Although bankers recognize that a minor revolution has taken place in banking practice, they believe that the change cannot be extended to include further purchase of Government securities. At present 23 per cent of their assets are in "Governments" of which nearly half is in long-term securities.

Situation Unique.

The present situation is unique and has no parallel in the financial history of the country. Bankers have recognized that Government bonds, particularly of the long-term variety at low interest rates, will depreciate seriously in a market calling for credit accommodation on a larger scale. But in previous depressions and recoveries the banks have never faced the situation with such large holdings of these securities.

Hence, bankers are pinning their faith on a steady credit market, continuation of the easy money market, increased Federal revenues, absorption of part of the Government's bond issues by agencies such as the Social Security Board, and—above all else—a diminution in Government spending and a quick return to a balanced budget.

Tokyo, Berlin May Sign Pact Against Russia

Military Agreement Likely to Protect Expansion Policies of Both.

Germany and Japan have joined hands in an effort to curb the spread of communism in Europe and Asia and to protect their own expansionist plans, according to reports from Europe and the Orient. Significance of the reports is explained by Miles W. Vaughn, for nine years Far East manager of the United Press, with headquarters in Tokyo, in the following dispatch.—Editor.

New York, Nov. 19.—Reports that Japan and Germany are preparing to issue a joint declaration against communism means that Japan is determined to go ahead with her program for economic, military and political control of North China and Inner Mongolia and that Germany is strengthening her basic position so that she will be ready to expand eastward toward the Soviet Ukraine when the opportunity may arise.

First effect of the declaration—which reportedly will be backed by a secret German-Japanese military agreement providing for joint action by the two powers in event that either of them becomes involved with Russia will be vastly to strengthen the anti-Communist wall now being built around Red Russia.

It may seal the fate of the Chinese Communist Party, which for years has defied the anti-Communist government of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in Nanking; strengthen the group of Fascist states in Europe which have been supporting the Spanish rebels, and make increasingly difficult the role of Britain in her efforts to preserve peace in Europe and the Far East.

Terms May Be Loose.

The chances are that the reported military agreement will be in loose terms and designed more for moral effect upon Russia and the world than to provide a definite scheme of joint military action. Neither Japan nor Germany is in position to make definite commitments, such as a true military alliance would entail, at this time.

The Japanese have been active in North China for the past five years, since their army created the independent state of Manchukuo from China's old three northwestern provinces and Jehol, and always have felt that the great danger to their North-Asian expansion lay in the intense opposition of Soviet Russia.

They risked war by a hair when they took Manchuria and with it Russia's vital railway—the old Chinese Eastern Line, which provided a short route to Vladivostok, Russia's chief base in the Far East.

Following the Manchurian war Russia hastily strengthened her military establishment in Siberia and blocked Japan's desire to oust the Soviets from outer Mongolia and areas of North China, including Sinkiang. Japan, thus, was forced to make a counter-move.

That move is the impending German-Japanese agreement.

Revenge Basis Of Lewis Acts, Green Charges

Blames Mine Union Demand on Personal Enmity of Rebel Leader.

By the Associated Press.

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 19.—William Green accused John L. Lewis tonight of dictatorship, ingratitude and desire for "personal revenge" in ordering hi mto desert the American Federation of Labor's fight against Lewis' rebel unions.

Lewis had notified Green the United Mine Workers of America's executive board directed him to stop associating with the miners' enemies. Such association, Lewis said, was "treason."

Lewis is president of the miners' union. Green is a rank-and-file U. M. W. member in his home town, Coshocton, Ohio, as well as A. F. of L. president.

"Regardless of any attempt which you may make to secure personal revenge, I shall follow a policy of patience and self-control supported by a willingness to meet and settle differences in man-fashion at the conference table," Green's telegram said.

Green also sent a telegram to Charles P. Howard, accusing him as president of the International Typographical Union of blocking efforts to end the Lewis revolt amicably. Howard is secretary of Lewis' rebel committee.

Convention developments:

By an overwhelming vote the delegates denounced current seamen's strikes on the Atlantic Coast as the work of Communists.

Spencer Miller, director of the Workers' Education Bureau, counseled the convention to make peace with Lewis' rebels to present a united front to threats of fascism.

Max Zaritsky, president of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers, and the only rebel leader at the convention, likewise urged reunion to combat "the barons of industry."

Asking for an A. F. of L. investigation, Cesar Vilar, exiled president of the Cuban Federation of Labor, told the delegates Cuban workers were "suffering" under a military dictatorship.

Hawaii Asks for Food.

Honolulu, Nov. 19 (AP).—Gov. Joseph B. Poindexter today asked the Department of the Interior to dispatch a vessel laden with food and supplies to Hawaii to relieve an "alarming situation" caused by the maritime strike.

"The Territory already is faced with a serious shortage of dairy products and canned milk. Our butter, flour, potato, onion and rice stocks are alarmingly low," Poindexter said.

"Lost Horizon"

By William Lyon Phelps

New Edition.

I am very glad to see that the American publishers (William Morrow & Co., New York) have just got out an attractive new edition of James Hilton's famous novel, "Lost Horizon," originally published in 1933. This new edition is appropriately illustrated, and the pictures show a true feeling for the imaginative conceptions of the author.

• • • •

Although "Lost Horizon" is one of the most original and remarkable novels of the twentieth century, and although it was the twelfth novel in the chronological list of its author's publications, it had to wait a year for recognition. In June, 1934, appeared "Good-by, Mr. Chips," which made an instant success; a success so overwhelming, so universal in America, that every one who read it immediately wanted another novel by the same man. Everyone asked, "Has he written anything else?"

Then it was found that a novel by him had been published the preceding year, that its name was "Lost Horizon." When the year 1934 closed, among the five leading best sellers of the year were two novels by the same man, "Good-by, Mr. Chips," and "Lost Horizon."

• • • •

They are as different in style and subject matter as two books could be. But I think it took more ability to write "Lost Horizon" than it did to compose the other book. "Lost Horizon" is a work of sheer imagination, and the conversations in it are magnificent in their stimulus to the intellect and in their spiritual beauty.

The screen version of this extraordinary novel should make a sensation.

The Green Dragon.

At last childhood has a real champion, not just a make-believe friend like the photographer who fools baby into looking at the beautiful birdie to snap a smiling picture. Dr. Shirley W. Wynne, of New York, is a new St. George who is out to slay that dark green dragon—spinach. If the children don't like spinach, they do not have to eat it, says Dr. Wynne. There are plenty of other green, leafy vegetables that have everything that spinach has, and, says the good doctor, a wide variety of foods in the child's diet is far more valuable than the stressing and pounding of any one particular food.

Nevertheless, spinach will continue to be a dining-room ogre to many children. Back of some of the parental passion for spinach is the Puritanism that lingers on in American life. Some can remember when not a few folks were sure that ice cream must be either unhealthful or sinful—because it tasted so good. A relic of that same reflex is the notion that spinach must be good for a child if he doesn't like it.

Bendix Workers Await Parley Result in Plant

South Bend, Ind., Nov. 19 (AP).—Union leaders and officials of the Bendix Products Corporation met tonight to consider settlement of labor difficulties which haluted production in the Bendix subsidiaries three days ago.

Between 500 and 1,000 men and women workers maintained their vigil outside the closed plant as the conference dragged on. The workers were instructed, their leaders said, to make no move toward relinquishing occupancy of the shops until they heard from officers of the United Automobile Workers.

Roosevelt Ship Enters Realm Of Old Neptune

Pollywog Purge Demanded Ere Indianapolis Can Cross Over Equator.

By the Associated Press.

Aboard U. S. S. Chester, At Sea, Nov. 19.—"King Neptune" sent his emissaries tonight to the U. S. S. Chester and the Cruiser Indianapolis bearing President Roosevelt to the Inter-American Peace Conference in Buenos Aires.

The Presidential party was given formal notice that Neptune demanded his "loyal subjects" lay plans to purge the "pusillanimous pollywogs" of dockyard barnacles before entering his kingdom at the equator.

Whether the President, who has never crossed the equator, would be subjected to the same practical jokes as the other members of the party tonight was a matter of conjecture.

The vessels tonight were some 420 miles east of Miami, steaming along at 26 knots in a calm sea beneath a cloudy sky.

Heavy Clothes Doffed.

Heavy winter clothing was doffed for summer attire as the weather became steadily warmer.

The course was laid southeast toward the passage between Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands giving into the Caribbean Sea.

The President and his party were in excellent spirits and enjoyed a program of movies and radio after dinner.

The plan is for both vessels to refuel Saturday at Trinidad and then proceed to Rio de Janeiro which the captains hope to reach November 27.

After spending a day there during which he may address a joint session of the Brazilian Parliament, the President will re-embark for Buenos Aires.

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 19 (AP).—Secretary of State Cordell Hull tonight sounded a "passion of peace" keynote for the Inter-American Peace Conference at Buenos Aires.

"We go to the conference with greater conviction than ever that the road to peace is based upon economic understanding," Hull said, after his arrival here aboard the S. S. American Legion en route to Buenos Aires.

"Peace must be our passion," he added. "It must be a permanent peace founded on mutual understanding among the peoples of North and South America."

Greeted by Dignitaries.

Greeted by a white-uniformed Marine Band which struck up the "Stars and Stripes" as he stepped down the gangplank, Secretary Hull was met by Jose Carlos Macedo Soares, Brazilian foreign minister, and by other members of the cabinet and diplomatic corps.

A full day's reception program was carried out in his honor, climaxed by a banquet tonight.

The delegations of Haiti, Guatemala, Salvador, Nicaragua, Cuba, Venezuela and Mexico also disembarked from the American Legion and shared honors of the visit with Hull.

In a statement Hull asserted that achievements of the peace conference would constitute "milestones in the progress of international relationships."

He cited, in particular, results of the Brazilian-United States reciprocal trade pact as having demonstrated tangible benefits of international accord.

Mrs. Elsie F. Musser, only woman member of the United States delegation, announced she would ask the conference to receive the "people's mandate against war"—a petition bearing 2,000,000 signatures.

"Such a universal expression against war must influence world history and future international relations," she said.

Salt Lake City, Nov. 19 (AP).—J. R. Young has his Sundays and holidays dated up for some six weeks to come. RUTH FIELDS.

Oxon Hill Hunter Held, Police Search For Wounded Girl

The wounding of 15-year-old Ruth Fields, of Oxon Hill, Md., is in alleged hunting accident, confounded Prince Georges County police last night, because they could locate neither the girl nor her mother, Mrs. Lura Bertha Fields.

The girl, allegedly shot by Edward Halley, 21, a neighbor who was hunting quail, was removed to Casualty Hospital for treatment. There, superficial bird shot wounds of the head and face were given medical attention and she was released.

Halley, who told police that he fired at a flushed covery of quail, not realizing that the Fields home was adjacent, is being held in Upper Marlboro Jail while police tried to locate the girl and her mother.

Brazil's Leader Predicts Bloc Of 21 Nations

Defensive Combination to Be Avolved at Buenos Aires, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Rio de Janeiro, Nov. 19.—President Getulio Vargas predicted tonight "a defensive but not an offensive bloc" of 21 American nations would emerge from the inter-American peace conference at Buenos Aires next month.

Mr. Roosevelt is scheduled to reach Rio de Janeiro November 27. Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, who heads the main body of the American delegates aboard the Stream American Legion, is due here tomorrow morning.

Vargas declared Brazil would extend Mr. Roosevelt a welcome "worthy of one of democracy's leaders," and said he believed the American Executive's presence at the conference would "assure its success."

Contrasting the prospect of a successful American peace parley with what he called "the ugly mood of war" in Europe, President Vargas declared:

"The American nations can only organize for their mutual defense, not just to keep the new world out of the possible European war, but also to banish similar struggles from our hemisphere."

Paris Reds Demand Tardieu's Arrest

Paris, Nov. 19 (AP).—The Communist Party tonight demanded arrest of former Premier Andre Tardieu and two other prominent Rightists whom the party blamed for the suicide of Minister of the Interior Roger Salengro.

The Communists held them responsible for attacks on Salengro's war record which Leftists believed caused him to kill himself Tuesday night.

The political bureau of the Communist party urged charges be brought against Tardieu, Horace Carbuccia, editor of the Rightist munist Party urged charges be son-in-law, Jean Chiappe, former chief of Paris police.

The demand asked the government for "firm measures against those who organize civil war in France." Premier Leon Blum himself directed efforts tonight to prevent mass demonstrations against Rightists.

Social Register Omits Morris' Pet Pekingese

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—Rose, who was listed as the junior in the family of Mr. and Mrs. George L. K. Morris when the summer edition of the Social Register came out—and then turned out to be the Morris' pet pooch—was missing from the new edition of the register today.

The Morrises make their home in Lenox, Mass., and confessed during the uproar over Rose's inclusion that they had listed her just for the fun of it. Rose is an unpedigreed Pekingese.

The names of Mrs. Wallis Simpson, the Baltimore society beauty, and her divorced husband, Ernest Simpson, remained in the register.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

A cough, chest cold or bronchial irritation today may lead to serious trouble tomorrow. You can relieve them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified Creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery that aids nature to soothe and heal the infected membranes and to relieve the irritation and inflammation as the germ-laden phlegm is loosened and expelled.

Medical authorities have for many years recognized the wonderful effects of Beechwood Creosote for treating coughs, chest colds and bronchial irritations. A chemist worked out a special process of blending Creosote with other ingredients so that now in Creomulsion you get a real dose of Beechwood Creosote which is palatable and can even be taken frequently and continuously by adults and children. Thousands of doctors now use Creomulsion in their own families and practice, and druggists rank Creomulsion top because in this genuine, original product you can get a real dose of Creosote so emulsified that it goes to the very seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ-laden phlegm.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles, especially those that start with a common cold and hang on and on. Get a bottle of Creomulsion right now from your druggist, use it all up as directed and if you fail to get satisfactory relief, he is authorized to refund every cent of your money. Get Creomulsion right now. (Adv.)

With the backing of the 125 Protestant churches of the Washington Federation of Churches and civic organizations of the Capital a National Preaching Mission in which prominent churchmen from every part of the country will take part, will open here Sunday.

Scores of meetings, including mass assemblies, sectional conferences and devotional services will be conducted in the four-day program, and the activities in all the church will be centered on the Mission programs.

Described by its leaders as "the greatest Protestant evangelistic effort since the campaigns of Billy Sunday," the National Preaching Mission reaches the Capital on an itinerary that is taking it to all the principal cities of the United States.

At missions in other cities Washington ministers have been among the speakers. For the mission in Washington pastors and preachers from other cities will come here for addresses. There will be more than a score of outstanding speakers, including such prominent church figures are Dr. E. Stanley Jones, world famous missionary and evangelist of India; Dr. H. L. Dr. George W. Truett, pastor of the First Baptist Church at Dallas, Tex., will speak at the first of the mass meetings at 3:30 p. m. in Calvary Baptist Church. Dr. Jesse M. Bader, of Washington, will preside.

A half hour later, at 4 p. m., another mass meeting will open in Washington Cathedral, where Bishop Henry Wise Hobson, of the Protestant Episcopal Church of Southern Ohio, will deliver the address. The Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will preside.

A youth mass meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p. m. in National City Christian Church. Mrs. Grace Sloan Overton, author and lecturer on the Christian home of Harlan, Ind., will be the speaker.

Sectional Meetings.

The sectional meetings are scheduled for 8 p. m. as follows: Calvary Baptist, Herbert B. Clark, president of the Northern Baptist Convention, and Mrs. Harper Sibley, church leader of Rochester, N. Y., as speakers; Asbury M. E. Church, Dr. Willis J. King, president of Gammon Theological Seminary of Atlanta, Ga., speaker; Columbia Heights Christian, Dr. Truett, speaker; Chevy Chase Presbyterian, Dr. William H. Foulkes, chairman of the National Preaching Mission Committee, Newark, N. J., speaker; Petworth M. E., Dr. Jesse M. Bader, New York City, speaker; Memorial United Brethren, Dr. Worth M. Tippy, social service secretary, Federal Council of Churches, speaker; Georgetown Presbyterian, Bishop Hobson, speaker; Lutheran Church of the Reformation, Dr. John A. Mackay, president of Princeton Theological Seminary, speaker; Epworth M. E. South, Dr. Rufus M. Jones, Haverford College professor, speaker; Fifth Baptist Church, Dr. M. E. Dodd, First Baptist Church pastor in Shreveport, La., and St. George's Episcopal Church, Clarendon, Va., Dr. Walter E. Woodbury, superintendent of evangelism, Northern Baptist Convention, speaker.

Similar sectional meetings are planned for these churches each night of the mission. The four-day program reaches at climax Wednesday night when Dr. Jones and Miss Lester will address throngs expected to pack Constitution Hall and Continental Hall.

Cobalt Held Needed To Keep Man Alive

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP).—Cobalt, the mineral which gives the sapphire its blue, and the telephone its magnetic speed, is necessary to life as part of man's food.

It is the "catalyst" which enables his body to change its iron into red blood cells. It was added to the growing list of minerals which man must eat in tiny amounts if he is to live, in a discovery reported to the National Academy of Sciences today by Katsuji Kato, M. D., Japanese, assistant professor of medicine at the University of Chicago.

Philippines Bolster Law Against Sedition

Manila, Philippine Islands, Nov. 19 (AP).—President Manuel Quezon signed an amended bill yesterday putting teeth into the Philippine sedition law and a measure postponing provincial elections for one year.

Voting was postponed because, legislators said, they feared radicals would take advantage of the political campaigns to stir up trouble. Both bills were bitterly opposed by Communists, Sakdals, Socialists and Labor Unions.

The Community Chest "Good-Will Court"—the Legal Aid Society relieves troubled, tangled, taut minds with FREE legal advice. A Despair dispelling source to those who can't pay!

Travelers young and old—lost, bewildered—where to go—how to get there—who's to help? The Traveler's Aid Society—cheery, consoling, comforting—sends them on the right way. Despair done in!

Public Enemy Number 4

Despair, a subtle enemy, is the cunning accomplice of Crime, Disease and Hunger.

It seeks out men, women—whole families—whose defenses have been undermined by the ravages of want and disease. It destroys their weakened self-confidence. When despair grips the souls of a large portion of a community's population, mass discontent and disorder may readily result.

Despair saps the remaining strength of those denied work. It haunts the unmarried young mother in her hour of trial. It lures the youth standing on the brink of crime. It undermines the family. Children, even, succumb to it when parents are beset.

But Despair is vulnerable. It has been conquered in thousands of homes in this community through social service supported by your gifts.

"One Of Another"

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW,

"WHATEVER degrades a neighborhood can degrade a country. When poverty produces outbreaks of virulent infectious disease, as it always does sooner or later, the rich catch the disease and see their children die of it. When it produces crime and violence the rich go in fear of both. When it produces bad manners and bad language the children of the rich pick them up. If poor and pretty young women find, and they do, that they can make more money by vice than by honest work, they will poison the blood of rich young men who, when they marry, will infect their wives and children.

"The old notion that people can keep themselves to themselves and not be touched by what is happening to their neighbors, or even to the people who live a hundred miles off, is a most dangerous mistake. The saying that we are members one of another is not a mere pious formula to be repeated in church without any meaning; it is a literal truth; for though the rich end of the town can avoid living with the poor end, it cannot avoid dying with it when the plague comes."

Our Correspondents Begin to Express Enthusiasm Over Their Favorite Works of the Theater Year

One Selects Her List of the Season's "Ten Best Pictures of the Year;" Another Chooses to Laud a Child Actress for a Remarkable Performance; the Variety Club Plans to Surpass All Previous Programs at Its Third Annual Rout Saturday Night.

THE season of selecting the "ten best" of this and that having arrived —as vagrantly proclaimed here a few days ago—Mrs. J. J. O'Connell, 1301 Massachusetts avenue northwest, is the first to send in her choices for the critical accolade of the season of 1935-36.

BELL.

Mrs. O'Connell, in the exuberance of her nominations, describes them as "The best pictures of the air," meaning, I take it, "year," and has a title or two slightly confused, but her list, nevertheless, is worthy of note as evidence of a close and understanding appraisal of the year's cinematic output.

Mrs. O'Connell's list in the order in which she makes her selections is this: 1. "Dodsworth." 2. "My Man Godfrey," who is inadvertently referred to as "Gregory." 3. "Anthony Adverse." 4. "Libeled Lady." 5. "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie." 6. "Cain and Mabel." 7. "Charge of the Light Brigade." 8. "The Great Ziegfeld." 9. "The Devil Is a Sissy." 10. "The Gorgeous Hussy."

While these are not my ideal choices among the releases of a year that has been extraordinarily prolific in fine screen productions, it probably represents a fair average of public, cross-section judgment.

It will be interesting to note other selections that will filter in to the drama desk before the critics are called upon to make their choices of "the ten best pictures of the year" for Jack Alicoate's Film Daily's annual poll that comes off in December.

* * * *

The whole trouble with these "ten best" contests—if that is what they may be called—is that they require the expression of critical judgment among some 400 or 500 annual releases, which no single commentator ever could possibly hope to have seen in their entirety unless he dedicated his life to sitting in a projection room doing nothing but scrutinizing celluloid fables, day in and day out. One would have to view an average of almost two pictures every day in the year to keep up with the American output of feature productions. However, guessing games always are fun—even if you guess wrong.

* * * *

With an idea of bestowing praise where it is most deserved, Mr. J. W. Ward, 1129 Connecticut avenue northwest, writes us the following encomium of a remarkable performance on the part of a child actress, with which we are in hearty consonance. Says Mr. Ward:

My Dear Mr. Bell: The child prodigy has always been a good subject with which to start a quarrel with this writer who often thought the brilliant brat something of a nuisance; however, as an amende honorable, we state the following as a matter of record, so that when you and your colleagues get together to pass on the best acting in a screen performance for 1936, our conscience will be clear even if youse fellers ain't done your duty.

We refer to the work of the youngster who played the stooge for the little vixen in "These Three." The piece was well cast throughout and the work of McCrea, Oberon, Hopkins, and especially the actress who played the part of the grandmother, was worthy of all praise, but the exhibition of a tortued human animal as given by that little girl, whose name we do not recall, was one rarely witnessed in the movies.

When this youngster was threatened with reprisals by the "vixen" if she revealed the truth about certain happenings in the rooms of the young ladies' academy, she gave one of the most remarkable characterizations of intense mental suffering that it has been our privilege to witness in many years of theater going. There were two or three scenes when this child, driven to the wall by fear of the vengeance of her torturer, made this auditor positively uncomfortable as we watched the quivering lips, the dilated eyeballs, the twitching features and the spasmodic movements of hands and shoulders of a sensitive human being gripped in the overmastering fear of a mental experience that, apparently, has almost reached the end of endurance.

It was only a child performing; probably, if she were asked whether it was "acting" we were witnessing, or whether she was, in fact, reacting to deep emotion and mental reality, the youngster wouldn't know what we were talking about! That age-old conundrum is still unsolved by even the greatest tragediennes of our recollection.

Our experience has been that flashes of histrionic genius displayed by children similar to this have not had their counterpart in later years' impersonations, except in a few instances. Perhaps, in the years to come, this youngster may be only a second-rater. But this auditor remembers her characterization in "These Three" as a very remarkable hit of delineation that deserves a "hand." J. W. W.

The juvenile actress to whom Mr. Ward wishes to pay tribute was little Miss Marcia Mae Jones and the "vixen" was Bonita Granville, daughter of Bernard Granville, former "Follies" dancing comic, whose inebriation numbers were almost on a par with Leon Errol's.

The grandmother referred to was Alma Kruger, that admirable character actress who did such superfine work in Max Gordon's production of Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice," as adapted to the stage by Helen Jerome.

Mr. Ward is a discerning critic.

The most notable program of the three that will have been provided for the annual frolics of the Variety Club of Washington, to be celebrated this year in the grand ballroom of the Willard Hotel on Saturday night at 7:30, has been arranged by General Chairman Carter Barron, Guy Wonders, Gene Ford, Phil Hayden, Clark Davis and Pete Macias. The complete vaudeville bills from the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater and Loew's Capitol will be on hand, plus Jimmy Lunceford's orchestra and revue, talent from the various night clubs and notables from all walks of life, including Gov. Harry Nice of Maryland and 500 of the club's member "barkers." Ceremonies will be mastered by Johnny Perkins, headlining at the Capitol; Audrey Sieber, mistress of ceremonies at the Earle, and Lee Everett, WRC's "Night Owl." Among the night club entertainers will be Pat Rooney and Marion Bent, Pat III and Janet Reade. Quite a show and well worth the $7.50 per plate being assessed, since all of the proceeds go to the club's welfare fund for the melioration of distress among small children.

Mixes Ponies and Postcard Verse

Belasco

"LA KERMESSE HEROIQUE" (Carnival in Flanders). American Tobis Corporation release of the Films Sonores Tobis Espinay picturization of a story by Charles Spaak, with screen play by Bernard Zimmer, starring Francoise Rosay, supported by Jean Kerad, Alerme, Micheline Cheirel, Bernard Lancret, Louis Jouvet, Alexandre d'Arcy, Maryse Wendling, Ginette Gaubert, Alfred Adam, Arthur Devere, Marcel Carpentier, Claude Saint Val and Delphin. Music by Louis Beydts. Directed by Jacques Feyder. Reviewed (third week) by Richard Q. Jones.

Re-creating seventeenth century Flanders and performing with abandon that prevents the work from being stiffly dated, "La Kermesse Heroique" ("Carnival in Flanders") continues to be the mainstay of the Belasco Theater program.

Unquestionably the finest comedy to come across the big pond in any season, the picture gives the idea of male superiority a wholehearted ribbing.

In the principal role of the burgomaster's wife who leads the women folk of Boom to entertaining a Spanish duke, Francoise Rosay does a fine job, with Alerme, as the burgomaster, Louis Jouvet, as the hypocritical padre, and Jean Murat, as the duke, coming through in the grand manner.

Columbia

"PIGSKIN PARADE" Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Arthur Sheekman, Nat Perrin and Mark Kelly, with screen play by Harry Tugend, Jack Yellen and William Conselman, featuring Stuart Erwin, Patsy Kelly, Jack Haley and the Yacht Club Boys, supported by Johnny Downs, Betty Grable, Arlene Judge, Dixie Dunbar, Judy Garland, Anthony Martin, Fred Keller jr., Grady Sutton, Elisha Cook, jr., Eddie Nugent and Julie Tannen. Music and lyrics by Leo Robin and Sidney D. Mitchell and the Yacht Club Boys. Directed by David Butler. Reviewed (return engagement) by W. A. Whitsell.

We are laughing yet. And we not! With Ted Healy as a football coach, Patsy Kelly as his director's genius, Stuart Erwin as the epitome of yokelry gone football, the Yacht Club Boys with their own topical song-stories and a whole galaxy of charming girls who sing and dance, it is to laugh.

That's "Pigskin Parade." And if you want a better melange of football, comedy, burlesque, girls, music, dance and romance, then it is difficult to know where you're going to get it.

The beauty of this picture is that its only serious purpose is to amuse, and it does that plenty!

If your risibilities have not been tickled for a time—or you feel that the pre-Thanksgiving turkey should be shaken down a bit—hie yourself to Loew's Columbia Theater and forget all about pills and thoroughly enjoy yourself.

Selected short subjects complete the bill.

MRS. ELY CULBERTSON ON CONTRACT

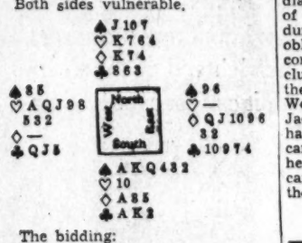
By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

"Without exception the world's greatest player and teacher," Ely Culbertson says.

A Bridge Crime.

If you asked the average player, "What is the worst possible play at bridge?" he would probably answer, "To trump your partner's Ace." But in a recent rubber bridge hand, the only correct defense consisted in committing that very "crime."

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
2 ♠	4 ♡	4 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

North's free raise to four spades was a little tenuous. South cannot be blamed for jumping immediately to six. His partner could not have much strength in spades and consequently had to have some high cards in the minor suits. With strength solely in hearts, he would have doubled West's preemptive bid.

West opened the Ace of hearts, and East discarded a diamond. This was not his best play. He should have realized that South would not have jumped immediately to a slam with two losing hearts in his hand. The most East could hope for was that South had one heart. In that case it would do no harm for East to trump and to lead a diamond, hoping that his partner was void of that suit. As it happened, this defense would have beaten the contract.

When the hand was actually played, West led the Queen of hearts at the second trick. Declarer trumped and took two rounds of trumps, ending in the dummy. The King of hearts was cashed, South discarding a low diamond. Then South run off all of his trumps, discarding from dummy two little clubs. East was obliged to hold three diamonds, and consequently had to let go of two clubs. When declarer next cashed the Ace and King of diamonds, West was squeezed. Holding the Jack of hearts and three clubs, he had to make a discard. If he discarded the heart, dummy's seven of hearts would win a trick; if he discarded a club, South would make the Ace, King and deuce.

Miller Will Describe Trans-pacific Flights

Personal experience in flying the Pacific with the huge clipper ships of Pan American Airways will be related by William Burke Miller, a representative of the National Broadcasting Co., before members of the National Geographic Society in Constitution Hall this evening.

Miller was one of the first passengers to make a round trip over the Pacific on the new air route. The lecture will be accompanied by motion pictures and colored lantern slides showing scenes in island stopping places.

Manhattan Cocktail.

ENTERPRISE: Laurence Stallings, Heywood Broun and Deems Taylor dined with Herbert Bayard Swope, who once was their boss on the old World . . . "If you buy a paper," they told him, "we'd all quit our jobs and go to work for you again. In fact, we'd get the old staff together again" . . . Swope penciled the names on the tablecloth of the men who worked for him, together with their present salaries. . . . "No paper could make a profit with a reportorial staff like that now," Swope tabulated. "According to their present salaries, my pay roll for reporters each week would be $18,000!"

CHANCE: Sam Boston, the betting commissioner, has settled all the election bets he handled with one exception. The exception is Attorney Sam Schwartzman—who had wagered that Landon would receive 145 votes . . . Schwartzman refuses to pay up, insisting now that he meant popular votes.

ART: The suffering artists who have been displaying their work in Washington Square's open-air marts need worry no longer about the elements . . . Their Guild is accepting the invitation extended to them, worded: "A chance to exhibit your work in a refined atmosphere is hereby offered . . . The paintings henceforth will be on view in the refined lobby of the Oriental Theater on Broadway—the newest enterprise of the Minskys.

AMITY: The Barrymore family hasn't taken kindly to John's newest escapade . . . Last week the bridegroom visited a movie set where a popular film is being screened. "Dammit," the director fumed, it's not cold or icy enough for the shot. How'll I fix it? . . . "Easy," John told him. "Just bring Lionel here—and let us look at each other for two minutes."

BLISS: When Mary Pickford and Buddy Rogers announced their forthcoming engagement the other day, the reporters descended upon Miss Pickford . . . who was busy packing away some initialed handkerchiefs, tablecloths, napkins, etc. . . . After the newspaper men had left, she turned to one of her friends—and pointed to the initialed ware. "Well," she laughed, "this time my embroiderer will have an easier job, converting the 'P.'"

ROMANCE: They're crediting this to Sam Goldwyn. He read the daily headlines concerning Mrs. Simpson, Goldwyn pointed to the eight-column streamer announcing the marriage. "Looka such excitement," he said. "The way they're raising such a hullabaloo — you'd think she was marrying Clark Gable!"

CONQUEST: Voyagers who returned on the Queen Mary this week huddled over this story: On the second day out, a cabin-class passenger met J. P. Morgan and tried to discuss world affairs. "What do you think," the financier was asked, "of Hitler recognizing Mussolini's conquest of Ethiopia?" "Off the record, and don't use my name," Morgan is reported to have whispered in reply, "I recognize that William the Conqueror won the Battle of Hastings!"

ROBERT MONTGOMERY.

Neatest act to my knowledge was that of a young man who hitch-hiked here from Oklahoma. He somehow persuaded Robert Montgomery's cook that he was a personal friend of the star, and when Bob arrived, the intruder had finished an afternoon nap and was bathing preparatory to dinner. The cook had set an extra plate.

Fortunately for the unbidden guest Montgomery has unremitting sense of humor. The episode feathered his funny-bone, and he fed the fellow, quartered him for the night and next day sent him back to Oklahoma.

Doggondest thing I have seen in in a coon's age is Harmon O. Nelson's singing Doberman. Nelson is Betty Davis's husband; she gave him the dog. Perhaps it is because Nelson is an orchestra leader that he has musical ambitions for his pet. At any rate, he is teaching the Doberman to howl the scales. You may strike me down with a belaying pin if the dog doesn't howl four distinct notes! I have heard it, and am not a drinking man. Some day I intend to circulate among Bette's neighbors and find out what they think of the dog's daily singing lessons.

Norma Shearer tells me about a recent marriage proposal she received. Her young son brought home some equally youthful friends yesterday, and one 6-year-old promptly fell in love with Norma. He gazed at her intently for most of the afternoon, and finally summoned courage to ask:

"Will you marry me." Miss Shearer smilingly (it must have brought a tug to her heart) said the proposal was too sudden. Later, as the boys were departing, her suitor drew near and whispered, "Keep me in mind, just in case."

As Norma told me the story, her eyes suddenly went dreamy. "That's the first time I've ever heard the words 'Will you marry me?'" she mused. "Irving (her late husband, Irving Thalberg) and I were just married. He never really asked me."

Bride-to-Be

CHAPTER II.

"You are the strangest man I've ever known," Becky said.

"You haven't answered my question," Philip remainded her.

"I'll try," she promised, "but I may not be able to forget all at once. You've made me so self-conscious."

"I've felt that way, too," he admitted. "But I didn't mean to hurt you by what I said. And I couldn't wait until tomorrow to tell you so."

They had reached the house which was lighted in the hall by one solitary lamp in the library. Becky went into it feeling as if it were their home. Without removing her hat she seated herself at the desk. Philip smiled at her and began to dictate in Spanish. But before he had spoken more than a dozen words, the telephone rang. Becky answered it, and transferred the instrument into his hands with a peculiar expression on her face.

"New York is calling you," she said and rising went into the hall and closed the library door behind her. This time at least she would not be guilty of overhearing his conversation with Lelia.

She was in the kitchen where Norah was finishing the dishes when Philip came after her.

"All right!" he said. "I'm ready."

His mouth had the same rigidity it had worn the day of Regina's visit. It seemed as if any intimacy between them was fated to be always interrupted. Becky thought sadly. Every time just when she felt that things were going smoothly something or someone interfered.

She finished the letter without comment from either of them and rather silently he took her home. But when they stood before her door Philip took her hand.

"Good night, Becky!" he said and something in his voice and the pressure of his hand made her feel that in spite of the telephone call there was a definite bond between them.

And th next few weeks justified all she had thought, for little by little as they worked together Philip's reserve toward her melted. Regina had evidently decided there was nothing to be done amout it and left them alone.

Lelia was still away. Even Francis, jr., seemed to be occupied by his own affairs. He was seeing his old crowd again, Philip said, but managing to get to bed early enough so that he could go to the factory every day.

"I think it's good for him to be on his own," Philip added. "He's more civil to me than he has been since I came home."

He did not know and Becky did not tell him that scarcely a day passed that Francis did not telephone that he must see her. She had hoped her refusals drove him back to Stubby Vinton, but when she asked him how Stubby was he replied, "All right I guess. Why?"

"I just wondered," Becky answered. "She never calls the house any more."

"She probably knows it's no use," he said.

In spite of their much-vaunted sophistication they were about as childish a pair as Becky had ever seen. The twins, she thought, had more common sense.

Philip worked upstairs in his own room, but he was constantly coming downstairs to show Becky the result of his labors. He had submitted several sketches for various buildings around town and one day he received the contract for a new theater.

When the letter came, Becky was so thrilled she ran upstairs with it in her hand. He was in his room, but the door was open and he stared at her in surprise as she flew in, waving the piece of paper.

"Oh, Philip!" she cried, forgetting formality. "They've taken it."

She placed the letter in his hand and waited, beaming with pride, for him to read it. When he had finished he took her hands, saying, "This means I stay in San Francisco, Becky!"

"I'm so glad," she returned.

Suddenly—neither of them knew quite how it happened—he kissed her.

"You've been such a help to me," he said. "It's meant everything to have you to talk to the last few weeks. You know, Becky, my life would have been entirely different if I could have known you when I was younger."

She was trembling so that she could scarcely stand.

"My life has been different ever since I met you," she confessed.

His black flecked eyes shone upon her with a desire which could not be denied but his voice was shy.

"You must have any number of boys of your own age crawling around at your feet."

"No one who matters," she replied gravely. "I have dates sometimes, but never with anyone I care about."

Visibly encouraged by this, he asked, "Don't you think we ought to have dinner together tonight to celebrate?"

"Supposing someone should see us?" she teased.

Philip laughed.

"I hope they do. Say you will, Becky! Please!"

He was like a boy released from school. All his doubts and inhibitions so far as she was concerned seemed to have disappeared. The difficulty came later from her own family whom she herself had prejudiced against him.

"He is a very dangerous man," her mother said. "Something almost hypnotic about his eyes."

"Did you notice that, too?" her daughter asked.

"He's too old for you," her father objected. "And too experienced."

"Too experienced?" gasped Becky. "He is shyer than any boy I know."

Too late she realized how she was defending him.

"When your employer's son wanted you to go out with him you refused," her father reminded her.

"This is different," she contended. "In what way?" he asked reasonably.

But when Becky tried to explain she only became confused. She could not confess to her middle-aged conventional parents, much as she loved them, how she really felt about Philip. Could not admit to them that her entire world was bounded now by his smile. That his kiss had swept her into paradise. That all afternoon the clock in the hall had ticked, "Tonight! Tonight! Tonight!"

She didn't have to tell them. They knew and, too wise to say any more, they only watched with disapproving eyes as Becky dressed in the new black satin, the new hat and shoes and waited for Philip to come for her.

Their first dinner together! She had been right to listen to her inner urge to buy a dress for it. In spite of all he had said to discourage her she couldn't refrain from seeing that daily he was turning toward her, depending on her more, confiding in her oftener. Little by little the flame of her love was burning away the barriers between them. Today he had kissed her and admitted if he had known her sooner his whole life would have been different.

She would make herself so necessary to him that eventually he would see that it wasn't too late. That the years and experiences between them did not matter.

"A BILL OF DIVORCEMENT." RKO-Radio picturisation of the play by Clemence Dane, starring John Barrymore, supported by Katharine Hepburn, Billie Burke, David Manners and Elizabeth Patterson. Directed by George Cukor. Reviewed (revival) by W. A. Whitney.

Several years ago it was this reviewer's pleasure to witness the screen debut of a young woman who has since become one of the ten most profitable names in the motion picture business. Happy, indeed, was the combination of events that brought Katharine Hepburn to prominence in "A Bill of Divorcement."

With John Barrymore and Billie Burke to carry the major portion of the burden—actors whose talents could not but spur the novice to her best—Miss Hepburn turned in a performance which we deem her best, with the possible exception of that in "Mary of Scotland."

Briefly, the story revolves around a man who returns, after a number of years in an asylum, to his home to find his wife has divorced him and remarried. The daughter, realizing a mental flaw in the line, breaks off her engagement to devote her time to her father's care.

Mr. Barrymore, as the husband; Miss Burke, as the wife, and Miss Hepburn, as the daughter, all turn in magnificent performances, with David Manners, Elizabeth Patterson and Paul Cavanaugh, in the supporting cast, abetting in fine fettle.

If one missed this picture earlier—which was, incidentally, one of the "ten best" of its year—by all means see it. It has a fine story and is excellently presented, besides being an "early Hepburn."

RKO-Keith's

"THE LUCKIEST GIRL IN THE WORLD." Universal picturization of Anne Jordan's magazine story of "Kitchen Privileges," adapted to the screen by Herbert Fields and Harry Meyers, featuring Jane Wyatt and Louis Hayward, with Nat Pendleton, Eugene Pallette, Catherine Doucet, Phillip Reed and Viola Callahan. Directed by Eddie Buzzell. Reviewed Thursday night.

Based on the "richest girl in the world" theme—as well as the luckiest—this genial little fable has to do with the romantic perplexities of a brilliant young socialite in love with a tennis player, who is prevented by irate parents from following the promptings of her heart, as the saying is.

Bundled off to New York, she falls in love with another youngster, who, in turn, will have nothing to do with her once he discovers her real identity and the tremendous volume of the family bank account. So Patricia Duncan flitters home again, only to learn, to her slight dismay, that the Adonis of the tennis courts has married another girl much richer than she is. So what does she do? So she convinces the New York lad that he, after all, is the one and only, as another quaint saying has it, and that money really doesn't matter.

So you see the kind of fluttery little yarn it is. No particular substance, no novelty to mention, no originality of treatment, but a harmless trifle that will do to while away that vagrant hour or so until the Translux gets itself opened.

Cast Is Well-Behaved.

The girl in the case is interestingly and effectively portrayed by Jane Wyatt, who is by way of being a bit of a socialite on her own account and therefore is not precisely doing an imitation. Louis Hayward and Phillip Reed are the lads in the case, and Nat Pendleton is cast as the lumbering detective assigned to "guard" Miss Duncan in New York. When Nat Pendleton wants to lumber, I mean he lumbers!

The more adult members of the cast, tossed in, no doubt, to give the thing a little box-office ballast, include Eugene Pallette, recently seen to great advantage as the man of the crazy house in "My Man Godfrey;" Catherine Doucet, who will be remembered by stage devotees for her splendid work in Rachel Crothers' "As Husbands Go," and since has been seen in numerous jittery screen impersonations, and Viola Callahan in a minor role.

The supplementary features of the bill are led by a short-reel subject starring the Hall Johnson choir of Negro vocalists, celebrated for their work in both the stage and screen versions of "The Green Pastures." There are shown, in addition, a natural color cartoon comedy, "The Merry Mutineers," and a new issue of the Pathe News.

Women Drivers Stage Ability Test as Gadgets Blink During Safety Committee Session in Sulgrave Club

Mrs. George Thorpe Heads Meeting; Mrs. Goodwin Sets High Score.

Mrs. Taliaferro 'Victim' but Insists Upon Having First Laugh.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

The usual formality of tea at the Sulgrave Club was abandoned yesterday afternoon as members of the Women's Safety Committee of the District of Columbia Motor Club and their guests tried out a variety of little gadgets which registered their auto during ability.

Mrs. George C. Thorpe presided at the meeting at which the test devices were explained before their actual demonstration. Then the ladies were invited to take the tests.

Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin who loves to motor as well as to ride her horses, was one of the first to step forward. Her score was evidently satisfactory and she excelled in the test for muscular reaction, sort of a five-finger exercise, in which her recent attention to her piano practice stood her in good stead. "But who can stop my going through red lights?" she inquired ruefully when the test was over.

She presented an artistic picture as she took the tests, wearing a green tunic over black and a black hat on her auburn hair.

Mrs. Sidney Taliaferro, who wore a smart brown suit and hat, with a powder blue blouse, was another willing "victim." She laughed as she took her place at the wheel of the first device and remarked to Mrs. George Barnett, who stood by, "you see I don't mind making a monkey of myself in a good cause." Mrs. Barnett was protesting she wanted to know her own score before anyone else saw it: "I'd like to laugh at myself before anyone else does, and one has to be quick to do that, you know."

The occasion was altogether a gay one. The guests who gathered in the ballroom of the club, and sat with serious attention while the devices were being explained, abandoned the little gold chairs and hurried from one test to the next, either to take it or to watch their friends go through the paces.

Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, who wore black, and Mrs. Wilbur Carr, who was in a green costume, were content to watch the others and sat and talked together as they looked on.

Mrs. Goodwin, afetr her turn, joined Mrs. J. Borden Harriman and Mrs. Blair Bannister and they exchanged notes on the recent campaign and election. Mrs. Harriman was in a becoming costume of rust-color and Mrs. Bannister in green.

Several of the members of the teaching staff of the public school system were there, among them Miss May P. Bradshaw, who has just been made principal of Roosevelt High School. She wore a brown coat and hat and a corsage of orchids.

Mrs. Joshua Evans, one of the members of the women's safety committee, and Mr. Evans were also there, as were both Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Lawrence V. Benet, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, who appeared well satisfied with her chart after the tests. One of the ladies took the test at the "glare-meter," remarking "I'm not in the driver's seat, but I do drive from mine."

Among others who were enjoying the occasion were Mrs. Louis Caldwell, in black and wearing a black kidskin coat; Mrs. George Oakley Totten, in a brown tweed suit with racoon collar and knitted blouse; Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, making arrangements for a similar demonstration at a coming meeting; Mrs. Harold N. Marsh, Mrs. Floyd Crosby, Mrs. John Bennett and Mrs. Elizabeth Peeples.

Mrs. Carr and Mrs. Bannister presided at the tea table when the guests were served.

Underwood & Underwood.

Capt. Rhoda J. Milliken, of the Women's Bureau of the Metropolitan Police, left, Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, a member of the Women's Safety Committee of the Motor Club, and Mrs. Eugene V. Pugh, the "victim" of the testing device, one of several demonstrated at the tea yesterday at the Sulgrave Club.

Mrs. J. J. Mack Is Tea Hostess

Informal Party Is Given for Col. C. V. Humphrey, Visiting Here.

A pleasantly informal tea was given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. J. J. Mack at her home on Forest Lane, in honor of Col. Chauncey V. Humphrey, who is here from his home on Long Island for a short visit.

Lieut. Basil Toutorsky and his bride were among the guests yesterday. She wore a brown tweed suit and a trim little brown felt hat with a small brim. Also present were Mrs. Robert E. Lee 3d., Mrs. Berenice Fleming Holland, Mrs. Charles A. Zoller, jr., Mrs. Ross de Bruler Thompson, Baroness von Below, Miss Margaret Wooley, Mr. Jack Stafford, Admiral Christy and Capt. Thomas Jackson.

Mrs. Mack received in a tea gown of beige chiffon with wide bands of fur trimming the cape sleeves. Old Russia, Mexico, of which Mme. Toutorsky is a native, music—for Lieut. Toutorsky is a widely known pianist, violinist and composer—all came in for a share of discussion as did tennis, Col. Humphrey's favorite sport. He plans soon to go to Florida, "to keep the tennis season open without interruption."

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

Poor Marjorie Garland and Vivian Reed certainly had a time of it the other day persuading Lucille McGhee that she wanted to go for a ride with them. It seems that they had planned a surprise shower for the young lady whose marriage to Lieut. Dabney Waters will take place Monday afternoon and trying to keep it a surprise they endeavored to get the guest of honor out of her house and over to Marjorie's without telling her what the real reason was. Try as they would nothing would budge Lucille from her own four walls. No—she was expecting a call long distance—and intended to wait for it.

Everyone tried to think of excuses and finally—when it looked very black for the party—Lucille condescended to go for "the ride." Imagine her surprise when she entered the Garland home to find it illuminated by the soft glow of many candles, and filled with numerous friends, to say nothing of a huge silver slipper, the girls had found somewhere (we say huge because it was something like 3 feet long and had a heel of gigantic proportions) and it was filled with presents. The trouble is, that now, every time anyone suggests a ride to Lucille she will think that there should be a pot of gold or something at the end of the road.

An "all-American" luncheon was served the German guests of the Washington Automotive Trade Association at the Wardman Park Hotel yesterday afternoon—Maryland oysters, Michigan celery, California olives, etc.—and, as the "of course," the hosts sang "Sweet Adeline," which Mr. R. J. (Dick) Murphy announced as a good, old American folk song. The German guests also sang, leading off with "Deutchland uber alles." Little German flags decorated the tables and there was a general spirit of good will despite the fact the hosts and guests had some difficulty in conversing in their respective languages. Herr Blankenhorn attended as representative of the German Embassy.

Gertrude Lawrence has quite won the hearts of not only Washington theatergoers, but also those lucky souls who have been at the teas she has attended and who have met her. (If you read between the lines you will see our heart was among those lost in the shuffle, too.) She is a very wide-awake person, regards you with bright, interested blue eyes and is right there with an answer every time. She has fallen for this city of ours and of all the many places she has visited she says she would prefer to live here. At the tea given for her yesterday afternoon by the English Speaking Union, someone, attempting to call her bluff, asked her why she didn't settle down here. Whereupon Miss L. replied with a merry twinkle, "Oh, I have been to ever so many teas and things but no bloke has asked me—no one has so much as said yoi."

• • • •

Mrs. Bruce Wallace, who is the moving factor of the club, was graciously hurrying here and there serving everyone. The guests, most of them with a cup of piping hot tea in hand, surrounded the pretty and talented guest of honor, just looking and looking to take it all in and patiently (no we had better change that to impatiently) waiting for their chance to ask or say something. Gertrude was in a soft brown cashmere suit with a huge butterfly bow of russet velvet at her neck.

• • • •

Among the guests were: Lady Lewis, Mrs. Seth Williams and her charming blonde daughter, Elizabeth; Mrs. Elonzo Tyner, Mrs. Peggy Tyner Dugdale, Mrs. Dudley Morgan, handsome in red; Lady Reckitt and Mrs. A. A. Jones.

Mrs. Wrisley Brown was attired in black with a gorgeous collar of silver fox; Mrs. William Jennings Price, in vermillion crepe, was joined by her husband, who heard something about the recent voyage of the Queen Mary being rough and was tremendously interested, having just made a crossing himself.

Back to Gertrude for a moment. As is the present prevailing mode, the subject of Mrs. Simpson, THE Mrs. Simpson, came up and the little actress laughingly commented that she had been sending papers and clippings home from here and has received the astonishing news that within 24 hours each paper is practically in shreds, and the words just about dropping off the paper. No one thinks anything of calling someone up and saying—"Oh, I say—suppose I drop over for dinner, I have some new pictures of Mrs.—you know who.—Have you heard anything more?"

Others who were there yesterday were Mrs. William H. King, Mrs. William Fitch Kelly, Mrs. John A. Remon and Mrs. Mattie Wyatt Porter. It was too bad the teacups did not have the tea leaves in them, because then those present might have had the added pleasure of having their fortunes read by that clever little person, Mrs. Norman Kane, who is a whizz at this particular parlor or drawing-room trick.

Miss DeMass Becomes Bride Of New Yorker

Marriage of Washington Girl to Mr. Robert E. Way Is Announced.

Mrs. W. Alan Brett, of Washington, announces the marriage of her daughter, Dorothy E. DeMass, to Mr. Robert E. Way November 7 at the home of the bride's cousin, Mrs. Natalie J. Van Vleck, 1107 Fifth avenue, New York City.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her cousin, Mr. John Massee, and was given in marriage by her mother. She wore a gown of white satin and lace which matched the veil of Valenciennes, a family heirloom. Her flowers were gardenias and lilies of the valley fashioned into a muff.

Miss Margot Massee, the bride's only attendant, was attired in a gold satin empire gown and carried a sheaf of bronze chrysanthemums and autumn leaves. Mr. Gordon L. Way, brother of the groom, was best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Elwood J. Way, parents of the bridegroom, and Miss Dorothy Corbett, all of Washington, were present.

After honeymooning in New York and at Miro Rio, Florida estate of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Caleb Johnson, Mr. Way and his bride will make their home temporarily in Washington.

How Do YOU Feel About Mrs. Simpson's Romance?

Crowding wars, elections and other important news off newspaper front pages has been a recent daily achievement of the world's most talked-about woman—Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

How do Americans feel about the woman who has monopolized the attention of the world's most eligible bachelor, King Edward of England?

What part, if any, do American women in general think Mrs. Simpson should play in the life of the English monarch?

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Is It Lecherous to Enjoy Women's Society Without Wishing to Marry, Asks Defensive Bachelor.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a bachelor in my late thirties. I have a good position and should be in a position to marry—if I wanted to. I don't because I am quite satisfied with life as it is and principally because I have never happened to fall in love. By this I mean simply that I have never seen anyone with whom I wanted to spend the greater part of my time. Nevertheless, I enjoy the company of women of refinement and until recently had never been aware of the fact that an invitation to dinner or to dance is considered by an unmarried woman as a preliminary to a proposal of marriage.

* * * *

As many as three invitations issued to the same lady seem to commit me to the category of avowed suitor. And if, over a period of a few months, I should happen to ask a lady as many as six times to favor me with her company at dinner, the theater or elsewhere, and perhaps send her a bouquet of flowers in token of appreciation or courtesy, and fail to follow these attentions with a proposal of marriage, it seems I am to be classified as philanderer or beast.

* * * *

This is not intended as a tirade against women. I find the same attitude in my men friends who happen to know some lady with whom I have enjoyed an evening. Perhaps I should say at this point that I do not go in for necking or other such indoor sports favored by the modern generation. I have at times classified myself a cad through announcing rather bluntly, at the beginning of an acquaintanceship, that I was not interested in matrimony. This announcement seems not to have altered the nature of the lady's expectancy in the least.

* * * *

Since I am a person of no importance and average in appearance, I do not understand this attitude. Naturally, at my age most of my women friends have already reached the panicky age. But even so, do not some women of refinement—as well as their friends—realize that when a man has marriage on his mind, he says so; and that when he doesn't mention marriage, it is because he is not thinking of it.

* * * *

Is there anything lecherous in enjoying a woman's company at dancing, dinner and the theater, without wanting to marry her? It seems to me that I have to choose between leading a monastic life or marrying some creature I haven't the slightest desire to marry. What do you think? STUMPED.

Advice to Bachelor.

DEAR STUMPED: I think you are making a mountain out of a molehill. I think you must lack savoir-faire. If you don't choose to lead a monastic life, or marry some creature you haven't the slightest desire to marry, then you ought to squire such exceedingly popular young ladies as wouldn't marry you if they could. Regardless of your own complacent opinion to the contrary, I am sure there are plenty who could go out with you time and again and never once grab at you like the proverbial drowning man at the straw.

* * * *

Don't prate about your confirmed bachelorhood. One could scarcely blame the woman who had that gauntlet flung in her face along with first overtures toward social companionship for grimly determining to make you eat your words if she can. The confirmed bachelor doesn't need to proclaim his status. He's recognizable virtually on sight, and often his reputation precedes and envelopes him.

Don't go out with one woman exclusively if you don't wish your attentions to be misconstrued as matrimonially intended. Work up a list of three or four women friends, and divide your attentions impartially amongst them. Let each know that there are other women in your life, or shall we say in your social scheme of things? If necessary, let each think you are more seriously interested in one of the others than you are.

There is nothing at all lecherous about a man's registering enjoyment of some woman's society as dinner, theater and dancing companion, while never popping the question; but there is something distinctly annoying about a man who is constantly on the defensive lest he be taken into the camp of wedlock. My advice to you is to take it easy; let yourself go, as it were, and leave it to the ladies to think what they choose. As long as you don't co-operate they can't marry you. So why conjure up battalions of straw wives to batter down?

M. H.

* * * *

School Girl's Problem.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl in high school and I have a bitter problem to face. I like a boy who used to like me. Now he ignores me and tries to dodge me. Will you please give me some advice? Is he worth liking any more? Should I still feel the same about him? Please tell me.

IMPATIENT VIVIAN.

* * * *

DEAR IMPATIENT VIVIAN: Surely you don't need to be told that you are wasting your time in eating your heart out over a boy who likes you so little that he deliberately avoids any encounters with you? It would appear that he not only doesn't like you, but that he is on the verge of actually disliking you. Now that your little romance has evaporated, the only sensible thing to do is to so conduct yourself that he will at least retain a feeling of mild goodwill for you. And the way to do that is to avoid him quite as consistently as he avoids you, until he finally realizes that you are quite as eager as he to forget the whole thing and all that has passed. Then he may feel himself safe in treating you with casual friendliness.

* * * *

As things are now, he probably reasons that if he gives you a pleasant word or glance he will have you sobbing and pleading on his neck. Hence, he doesn't dare give you the friendly word or glance. Whether he is worth liking is not for me to say. I do not know why the friendship faded. It may have been as much your fault as his, or more his than yours. But the fact remains that if he doesn't want your friendship any longer it is surely his privilege to reject it, and it is only decent that you should respect his wishes in the matter. We have no more claims on our friends' time and attention than they choose to give us. And when erstwhile friends openly avoid us, we owe it to our own self-respect to learn how to be happy without them.

M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write to her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Woolen Stockings Come Into Favor For Winter Wear

Chicago, Nov. 19 (AP).—Women have revived the old homespun fashion of wearing wool stockings this season, and call it daring.

Through many a winter they suffered cold ankles rather than sacrifice trimness to bulky warmth, but the modern woolens, unlike their predecessors, are considered by early exponents of the vogue to pay proper tribute to the ankles.

The new winter hosiery displays entice milady with thin, well-shaped ribbed woolen stockings intended to be worn with wool dresses and suits. Colors are dark blue, wine, deep green and beige. There are knitted styles and giddy patterns for active sports.

With Patch Pockets and Gay Scarf

This slim figure-flattering frock of spun rayon combined with wool is ideal to wear under the winter coat. The patch pockets, the lines of which are carried down in the front pleats of the skirt, are distinctive features; also, the loosely tied silk scarf and smart leather belt.

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

FOR persons who prefer wools to silks for winter wear there are some new sheer woolens and wool-and-silk mixtures that are the last word in smartness. Because they are so delightful in texture and light in weight, they are manipulated exactly like silk fabrics—ideal to wear under heavy winter coats.

Woolens this season are extremely versatile. Styled in strictly tailored fashion, they are a good choice for business or shopping; cut along Empire or princess lines, they become smart afternoon costumes that can go anywhere with complete fashion assurance.

With dark fur and fur-trimmed coats, the majority of women like a change from the inevitable all-black frock and select brighter tones for this time of the year. Sheer wools and mixtures are thus appearing in lovely soft hues and subdued tones of brighter colors; greens, blues, reds, grays, purple and beige. To keep these costumes wintry in theme, dark accessories add a striking touch.

Regardless of styling or color, buttons appear on almost every type of woolen frock; parading down the entire length of the front, trimming pockets, outlining sleeve details. Fur and wool unite to fashion both informal daytime and dressy afternoon costumes; a bit of Persian lamb or mink giving a luxurious appearance to an otherwise simple frock.

Hats, bags, gloves and jewelry to wear with woolen costumes should be chosen according to the weight of the material and the styling. Some of the sheer wools and mixtures are so fine, it is almost impossible to detect them from sheer silk crepes. Accents to accompany these textures, to be harmonious, are more formal in character than the usual woolen accessories.

Woolens are echoing the period influences and sculptured lines of silk styling. Another smart idea, borrowed from silks, is the elbow-length sleeve; these combined with full, short skirts and high waistlines give the new sheer wools ultra-smart lines. Jersey, the perennial favorite, is also appearing in new and lighter weight interpretations. Due to the smartness of the material and adaptability to various stylings, it is one of the most popular of the "all-day" woolens.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

LITTLE DR. ALAN ROY DAFOE is with us again, quite undismayed by a $1,000,000 plaster aimed at him, and Broadway is looking up—laying aside its dirks and daggers to extend a warm right hand of fellowship to this nice little country doctor who likes to give up quintuplet cares occasionally and have a spot of quiet fun.

ALICE HUGHES.

Immersed in remote Callender, and devoted to tending the famous babies, Dr. Dafoe gets small chance to kick up in his quiet way. But now that he has seen his five aces through their second feature movie, the moment has arrived for his annual fling, and for several days he has moved among our brighter spots, his eyes a-sparkle behind his old-fashioned specs and his heart warm with the joy of living.

The little Doc invariably puts up at the quiet Hotel Chatham, on Park avenue, when he's in town, but he merely uses that as a base of operations for his forays into the village's evening pursuits. Dr. Dafoe has been doing pretty well for himself this year. I understand the Canadian government does something for him financially, since he has had to give up most of his practice, and it is probable he has not conversed on the radio for buttons. And no one begrudges him anything he gets, for he is a modest, amiable little man of science, ablaze with common sense and not a bit flustered by the international fame which unexpectedly fell into his ample lap one night in May, 1934. We have no more welcome visitor than the little gray man from Callender.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The canape situation has practically every American hostess down for the count, what with the search for novel tidbits—all of which have been served to death. So June Platt, one of our foremost hostesses, come 5 p. m., has hit on the very nifty scheme of letting each guest "spread his own." She merely sets out a big board filled with very thin slices of bread and butter. Several jars and pots of various "spreads" complete the picture, and it is every girl for herself. Maybe this is the solution to the whole matter, which has had more than one European government in a highly nervous state this past year or two. . . .

* * * *

To get back to that Book Fair of ours for a minute, the whole sedate place was thrown into quite a state, the second day, by the arrival of Author Sylvia Thompson wearing gold eye-shadow. This was a bit of a knock for a sedate book-mart and manuscript exhibit, and several of the higher brows were raised no little. However, Sylvia is certainly an author and had every right in the place, so there was nothing the people could do about it. But where do lady authors get these notions? We always thought they ran to sensible shoes. But authors have probably changed with the times since I was a chit of a girl writing bad poetry for the hometown paper . . .

* * * *

There's a long and interesting piece in the constant thievery that goes on in big stores, but for a moment I must be content to tell you about the resourceful Mrs. Oliver Iselin, who runs a thrift shop for charity here in a very big way. Low scoundrels were milking the profits from her philanthropic business, she found, so what did the clever Mrs. I. do but sew little bells into all the fur coats? Thus when a foul thief started walking off with a mink, she tinkled all over the place, and dropped it in dismay. And now the poor get more and bigger profits. . . .

I'm now getting cables on the wardrobe of Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson, of Baltimore and London. The latest states that Mainbocher, of Paris, is designing all the Simpsonian duds, and that before the recent visit to Balmoral no less than six frocks were delivered, three of silk.

Keeping Slender Is No Problem To Patricia Ellis

In keeping slender for the screen many of the players never touch the rich food they crave for months on end. But Patricia Ellis does—and she has lost 9 pounds during the past month doing it. Pat's weight-losing system is to eat as much as she wants for lunch because her strenuous afternoon activities naturally burn up the calories. However dinner time means only a cup of tomato juice or a bowl of clear brother for her. She hasn't found it difficult to diet this way due to the fact that all of her special wants are satisfied at the luncheon table.

Pat doesn't even sacrifice her favorite dessert, which is a caramel ring filled with anything from ice cream to apple sauce with whipped cream. The caramel is made by melting three tablespoons of butter, one cup of brown sugar and a pinch of salt together over a slow fire. When it has reached a sirupy consistency, four cups of cornflakes are stirred in. The concoction is then poured into a buttered ring and allowed to set in the icebox.

Crocheted Slip-ons Smart; Should Be Made Lengthwise

Two Identical Pieces and a Gusset

Pattern 5676

By Alice Brooks.

"WHAT beautiful gloves! And you made them yourself!" Mother, sister or friend is sure to be flattered by so personal a gift. They're so simple to do, too. Here's the secret—crochet each glove lengthwise; whip together the two identical pieces with contrasting yarn (in itself a decoration), and include gussets for that important wrist flare. You'll find these gloves will give the wear of an extra pair, made in either yarn or string. In pattern 5676 you will find directions for making these gloves; an illustration of them and of all stitches used; material requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 250 W. 14th Street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

Men Revealed With Manners On Cigarettes

Letter From Male Inquirer Brings Lively Debate as to Propriety.

By Margaret Wallace.

ONE WASHINGTON young man who does not want to be miserly but wants to do the proper thing has written us to ask if he is expected to furnish cigarettes for the young woman he takes out for an afternoon or evening. His letter reads:

"DEAR MISS WALLACE: On the basis of good manners, should a young man be expected to furnish his date with cigarettes, voluntarily or upon request, in a case where the young man does not ordinarily smoke. The question is not prompted by any feeling of economy or cheapness, but is merely to settle a question which is quite academic."

* * * *

"Well, it might be academic to that young man," a modern miss exclaimed," but to us cigarette-smoking girls it is something more. Would a girl take out her box of candy and proceed to eat it just because the young man she is with does not eat candy? He would provide her with candy if he knew the first rules of politeness and thought she wanted some. Then why not cigarettes? If a man knows a girl smokes and the two of them are going to be anywhere they can smoke, he should provide her with cigarettes. He should inquire what kind she likes and buy them for her, or order them for her if they are in a restaurant."

"Of course a man should buy cigarettes for the young lady he is with," said a young man. "I smoke a certain brand of cigarettes myself, but few of the girls I know like my kind. I always ask what brand they prefer and see that they are provided with them. The only exemption from this rule is when the young man is in a young lady's house. He should then smoke the kind of cigarettes offered to him and is not expected to provide them."

"Provide cigarettes for girls!" laughed a young miss derisively, "why, most of the boys I know smoke my cigarettes. I would be satisfied if they smoked their own and let me keep mine. Of course, I expect to give them cigarettes, just as I would any other refreshment, when they are guests at my house, but they ask me for cigarettes at the ball game and in a restaurant and other places."

These three opinions seem to indicate that the cigarette etiquette problem is a real one.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Psoriasis—A Stubborn Symptom.

One of the most common come-and-go diseases of the skin is known as psoriasis (the word psora meaning itch). As a rule the manifestation is not attended with extreme itching, although at times this symptom may be acute. The peculiar, scaly white patches are characteristic and may occur almost anywhere on the body, including the scalp.

In previous discussions we have mentioned the good effects that sometimes follow the use of calcium—either in the form of calcium gluconate or through drinking large quantities of milk. Many reports have been reached emphasizing the value of a fat-free diet. In some cases, at least, it is highly successful.

For some years it has been suggested that there is an intimate relationship between the digestive tract—particularly the colon—and the appearance of psoriasis. It has been observed that—in some individuals—following an attack of diarrhea the skin lesions vanished. It has been noted also that should purging of the digestive tract through the use of calomel or some other strong laxative be indicated for any reason, this procedure may lessen the eruptions.

Relapses Frequent.

Certain it is that changes in the metabolism of the individual are fraught with improvement. A patient living in a given section and using a standard diet who is covered with the scaly patches removes several hundred miles from his original habitat and adopts new food habits and—in consequence—the disease may clear up for a considerable period. Relapses, however, are the rule regardless of environment and they may be ushered in by some type of fatigue, dietary indiscretion, or worry that lowers body resistance.

So far as is known the disease has not been reproduced experimentally and the affected areas have searched fore and aft—without result—for the presence of some specific bacterium or fungus. In nearly every case yeast cells are found in the lesions, but they apparently have no relation whatever to the cause. They are like flecks of lint that may settle on a varnished surface after it has been dusted carefully.

Light Treatment.

Either alone or combined with other types of treatment, certain salts of gold have been advised. This is a toxic chemical, however, and must not be administered in the presence of kidney irritation, anemia, or disease of the blood vessels. Although some favorable reports have been published, the metal is not a specific and cannot be regarded as a cure. In a few patients, however, lesions that have existed for two years or more faded away. The particular solution employed is known as gold sodium thiosulphate.

By many authors ultraviolet light (the artificial substitute for sunshine) is considered the best all-around treatment. The applications are made until there is a deep tanning of the skin. In some cases the scales will disappear in a few weeks and in other months will be required. But, again, as with other types of management, this will not be successful with every individual.

DEAN GILDERSLEEVE.

Solid Learning Need of Girls, Says 'Achiever'

ARCH FOE of superficiality in education is Dean Virginia C. Gildersleeve of Barnard College who this week received the sixth annual award for eminent achievement given by the American Woman's Association. The medal was presented at the club's annual Friendship Dinner in New York. Previous winners of the award have been Margaret Sanger, Amelia Earhart, Frances Perkins, Mrs. Dwight F. Davis (formerly Mrs. Charles H. Sabin) and Mrs. Ogden Reid.

Dean Gildersleeve, in accepting the award, stressed her favorite theme—wider education in the liberal arts for women—a subject she discussed on her last appearance in Washington. In both interviews and speeches, Dean Gildersleeve has crusaded against the growing tendency in colleges to train girl's technically for making a living at the expense of their cultural and artistic development. Education in the liberal arts, she maintains, should form the groundwork for any woman's future usefulness and enjoyment of living, with professional training coming later.

Every woman's education, Dean Gildersleeve maintains, should consist of two parts, liberal and vocational, the "development of intelligence and spirit on one side and on the other the acquiring of vocational or professional tools that will enable expression of spirit and intelligence.

Dean Gildersleeve celebrated this yar her twenty-fifth year as dean of Barnard College.

Older Children Have Mean Job As Guardians

Parents Should Consider Problems Involved in Watching Others.

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

VERY FEW parents consider the equivocal position of the older child asked to take care of his or her younger brothers and sisters. He is given the responsibility for keeping them in order and out of danger but is seldom given the power to force their obedience.

Of course, to give him this power is dangerous. Few children of 14 or 15 have either self-control or the judgment to be permitted to punish their charges. They are apt to be arbitrary and bossy, and to enjoy to the fullest extent the authority to which they are unaccustomed.

On the other hand, what are they to do if their authority is flouted and the children, free from their parents' control, choose to run riot? Mary may insist on romping in the parlor and end by smashing a valuable ornament, and Tommy, who is never allowed to go out in the boat alone when his parents are about, may choose their absence as the one time when he can risk his life.

When the parents return they are apt to find chaos and insubordination, and their first question is sure to be to the oldest child, "Why did you let Mary and Tommy do such things?" How could the child have stopped them, short of exerting force?

Some children have the tact and skill to manage a group of youngsters, but they are rare. It is as a rule not only unfair but also unwise to put such a burden of responsibility on shoulders too young to carry it. If, however, it must be done, and there are occasions when there seems no way out of it, either let the older child have full authority and risk the abuse which is pretty sure to follow, or else hold the younger children entirely responsible for their own misdeeds.

The Federal Diary

By Samuel Lubell.

Blood Treaty

Chalk one up for boondoggling. One of the employes on a Federal writers' project in North Dakota has unearthed the only Indian blood treaty known to be in existence. Written on paper and probably signed as early as 1830, the treaty was found in an unclaimed safety deposit box.

The Indian Bureau was notified of the discovery and a photostat of the treaty was sent to the Smithsonian Institution for further study. Our old friends, the Sioux Indians, and three treacherous white men were the parties to the agreement. It reads: "A treaty of peace and friendship made and consummated by William Clark, Marian Edwards and Auguste Chouteau granting plenipotentiary rights by the United States of America to the Sioux Tribe."

For the Sioux, ten tribal chiefs signed in their own blood. The three palefaces didn't use blood, which is a pretty good indication of the relative good faith of the two parties. Or can it be that Clark, Edwards and Chouteau were just sissies?

Strangest request of the month received by the Interior Department's space-control section was one agency's demand for space for a recreational rifle range.

Tugwell's Debut

Rex Tugwell's swan song got much better press notices than his political debut, but then Tugwell had a star role when he quit while he was merely playing a "bit" when he was introduced in the political show.

It was during the 1932 campaign when Al Smith was willing to help a little to elect that "old potato," Franklin D. Roosevelt, President. One of the campaign issues was the tariff, with both Al and the President exposing their party's traditional low-tariff views. An alert Republican campaigner compared both Smith's and Roosevelt's speeches and found some of the major points in both speeches stressed in identical paragraphs.

Newshounds scurried about for the explanation and discovered that Dr. Raymond Moley, then a fairly obscure Columbia University professor, had been asked to help write the Smith speech. Not being an economist, Moley had turned to an even more obscure colleague, Dr. Rexford Tugwell, for some anti-tariff arguments. Tugwell, who had just finished writing a speech for Roosevelt, turned over his ideas to Moley, who, innocently enough, used them verbatim.

Thus was the country apprised of the existence of that group of Columbia University advisers, who later came to be known as the "brain trust."

Some AAA officials are wondering whether Charles D. Lewis will celebrate his promotion to the post of assistant director of the Northeast Division with the purchase of a new automobile. When Lewis came to the AAA in 1934 to head the tobacco cigar section, he startled everyone in the office by driving to work in a midget Austin, smoking big, black cigars furiously while at the wheel. Seeing this 5-foot man with a big cigar driving up to South Building in an Austin was not a picture but a caricature. Lewis, however, soon worked himself up to a full-size automobile and now, with a promotion under his belt, would seem to be in the market for a new model.

Criticism

Here's a letter we got the other day from a Treasury Department worker that should stir the anger of a group of emergency workers who formerly were employed in the loans and currency division but have since been transferred to the Internal Revenue.

"They tell me themselves that they do not work fast but stretch their work out so as not to be dismissed," writes our correspondent. "Some take a couple of days a week leave so as to extend their work. Can you go anywhere in private business and get away with this?

"These emergency workers are laughing up their sleeves, saying they are fools enough to accept the work and pay as long as the Government keeps them on. They get the same pay and privileges as the permanent civil service employes, so therefore should take the same competitive examinations. The Government should get wise to the expense these workers are putting them to, and get them to accept their dismissals gracefully, and be thankful they had work when the emergency in the Treasury Department existed. The Government owes them nothing."

Strong words. What do these emergency workers have to say?

Welfare Head Is Selected By Hierarchy

Mgr. Ready Honored by Dignitaries; Other Posts Filled.

Sympathy Message Sent to Spanish Catholics; Session Closes.

The American hierarchy of the Catholic Church, concluding a two-day meeting here late yesterday, sent a message of sympathy and encouragement to Catholics in Spain.

The message said that Spanish Catholics are "the victims of studied oppression," and added that their struggle has been "constantly misrepresented here."

Three cardinals, 11 archbishops and 75 bishops, representing more than 20,000,000 American Catholics, attended the meeting of the hierarchy at Catholic University. The cardinals were Denis Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia, who presided; George Cardinal Mundelein, of Chicago, and Patrick Cardinal Hayes, New York.

The hierarchy elected the archbishops and bishops who are to constitute the administrative board of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, the central agency for carrying out the program of the hierarchy. Archbishop Edward Mooney, Bishop of Rochester, was named chairman of the board and episcopal chairman of the executive department.

Mgr. Ready Elevated.

The administrative board, meeting later in the day, appointed the Very Rev. Michael J. Ready as general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, a post held by Mgr. John J. Burke, who died October 30.

The message on Spain stated:

"We pray that, in spite of the terrors to which the Catholics of Spain have been subjected, the cruelties they are forced to endure, and the sorrows constantly heaped upon them in the torture and murder of so many of their clergy and people, God will grant them the fortitude to stand fast and struggle on for the faith of Jesus Christ and the liberty of His holy church.

"The Catholics of America and a legion of their right-minded fellow-citizens have been horrified at the savage extremes to which irreligion and inhumanity have been carried. They deplore the horrible carnage the more deeply because of the conviction that the sufferings of the Spanish church are but the agony of civilization, battling for its spiritual and cultural heritage over the prostrate body of Spain. They know well that the Spanish Catholics are the victims of studied oppression and that men like-minded with their oppressors have constantly misrepresented here their struggle.

Served Since 1931.

"In all these injustices and sufferings our saddened hearts go out to the Church of Spain in sympathy and comforting encouragement. Already in answer to the appeal of our Holy Father, Pope Pius XI, and in filial endeavor to bear with him the burden of sorrow which the tragedy of Spain lays upon his paternal heart, our bishops have led their flocks in prayer for that afflicted nation. Again we exhort our people to turn to God in persevering prayer for the liberty of His church and the deliverance of the Spanish people from the thralldom of forces that are the foes as well of God and of all religion."

Mgr. Ready, who was appointed general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, has served as assistant general secretary since June 19, 1931. Just prior to that he was director of the Pontifical Society for the Propagation of the Faith in the diocese of Cleveland.

Is Papal Chamberlain.

He was born in New Haven, Conn., in 1893, and received his elementary school education in that city and at St. Peter's School, Mansfield, Ohio, to which his family had moved. His preparatory college work was done at St. Vincent's College, Latrobe, Pa., and he pursued his philosophical studies at St. Bernard's Seminary, Rochester, N. Y. His theological studies were made at the Seminary of Our Lady of the Lake, Cleveland, in which city he was ordained a priest in September, 1918.

Following his ordination, Father Ready became an assistant at St. Mary's Church, Painesville, Ohio. One year later he was transferred to the Cathedral Latin School in Cleveland, where he taught for four years. His next assignment was as an assistant at Holy Name Church in Cleveland, where in 1927 he became director of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith.

On December 6, 1934, Pope Pius XI named Father Ready a papal chamberlain with the title of very reverend monsignor.

Phone Typifies Pioneer Spirit, Gifford Holds

Local Group of Employes Hears A. T. & T. Head in Largest Hook-up.

The spirit of the telephone has been, throughout its history, the spirit of pioneering and adventure, Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., speaking from a special amplifying arrangement over long distance in New York, told 25,000 telephone pioneers of the United States and Canada in an address from New York.

Occasion of his address was the celebration in all the principal cities of North America of the twenty-fifth anniversary of founding of the Telephone Pioneers, an organization consisting of telephone employes who have had 21 or more years service.

In Washington, at a banquet in the Lee House, held in honor of the occasion, 375 District Pioneers celebrated and listened.

Other members employed by the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. met elsewhere in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

Largest Phone Hookup.

Gifford spoke during the official program, which began at 9 p. m. His voice was transmitted over the largest single telephone hookup in the history of telephone communication, and reached from coast to coast.

"New generations of Pioneers will live and serve as the years go on," said Gifford.

"They, too, will see changes and contrasts in the material and the mechanical things with which the telephone job is done—changes and contrasts so marked that one does not dare predict what they may be.

"But this we may predict, that in the spirit, the pioneering spirit of the men and women in the telephone business there will be no change."

Barnard Speaks.

Other speakers on the program included C. I. Barnard, president of the New Jersey Bell Telephone Co. and president of the Pioneers; J. E. McPherson, vice president of the Bell Telephone Co. of Canada and vice president of the Pioneers, who spoke from St. John, New Brunswick, and J. L. Kilpatrick, president of the New York Telephone Co., president-elect of the Pioneers, who spoke from New York City.

Honoring the meeting here was Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, wife of the president of the National Geographic Society and daughter of Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone.

J. O. Martin, editor of the Transmitter and president of the local chapter, was in charge of the program here, featured by addresses by Lloyd B. Wilson, president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Co., and John A. Remon, vice president.

Problems of Youth Analyzed At Public Symposium of Y. M.

Nine Young Men and Women Take Part in Program of Topics Ranging From Unemployment to Character Growth.

The problems of youth, as youth sees them, were put before the public last night at a symposium held at the G Street Young Men's Christian Association. Taking part in the discussion were nine young men and women, speaking on topics ranging from unemployment to character growth. Questions raised in the discussion were answered by a panel composed of local educators, business men and Government officials.

Declaring that "books, bluff and boondoggling have taken the place of the three R's," Miss Mabel Haller urged unemployed young people to work with their hands. There are plenty of jobs, she said, but young men and women today, with a smattering of education, are unwilling to accept menial employment.

In an analysis of youth's attitude toward marriage, J. B. Ross said that women lose their femininity through work in offices. He summed up with the statement "He travels fastest who travels alone."

Irving J. Schuyler raised his voice against an educational system which permits "snap courses." He vigorously attacked instructors who allow students to take courses for which they are not especially fitted but which are admittedly "easy."

Other members of the symposium were Harry K. Underwood, who discussed "Youth and the Church"; Miss Melba Goodman, whose subject was "Cultural Life"; Miss Gudrun Scheldrup, who talked on "Social Life"; Miss Mary Alice Johnson, whose topic was "Crime"; D. A. Heyward, who considered "Character Growth," and Robert Ferris, who talked on "Health and Recreation."

Giving his opinion on the question of vocational education, Dr. E. C. Higbie, president of Wilson Teachers' College, a panel member, asserted that the old secondary education ideas, which have been in vogue for 2,500 years, were adequate for a minority of students, but that some form of vocational guidance should be sought for the masses.

Barnet Nover, associate editor of The Washington Post, brought up the point that, since we cannot know the future, a trade once learned may be made useless in a few years through technological improvements.

A high degree of success in vocational training of CCC boys was reported by John Lang, assistant director of CCC camp education. Last year, he said, 145,000 youths had been placed in jobs through their training in the organization.

Dr. John T. Miller, who is a professor of science in human engineering, told the group there should be greater preparation made for married life and advised a sharper awareness of moral values.

Others on the panel were Miss Francoise Black, director of the National Youth Administration for the District, Richard Kruger, treasurer of the District Youth Council, and Louis B. Nichols, an administrative assistant with the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Police Request Hazen to Help Gambling Fight

Raiders Admit 'Loopholes in Law' Stump Them; Oehmann Called.

Admittedly stumped by their inability to obtain convictions of Washington gamblers because of "loopholes in the laws," Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and two members of the police vice squad yesterday called on Melvin C. Hazen, president of the Board of Commissioners, for aid.

Hazen thereupon called upon Col. John W. Oehmann, building inspector, to investigate a gambling house on Fourteenth street, between L and M streets, to ascertain whether any building regulations are being violated. Oehmann said he would make the examination today.

The Commissioner also asked advice of Vernon E. West, principal assistant corporation counsel, regarding the possibility of drafting a restriction which would prohibit the use of steel-barred doors such as are reputedly used on the gambling houses.

Hazen explained that this move was dropped, however, because it could not be invoked without injuring banks and reputable business establishments.

"The only solution is a better law," Hazen said.

"The police now can't get convictions, even when they find gambling in progress, to say nothing of confiscating gambling apparatus."

Edward W. Thomas, assistant corporation counsel, is chairman of a special committee now engaged in redrafting the anti-gambling bill, twice blocked in the House District Committee after being passed by the Senate.

The Commissioners are hopeful that the revised measure will overcome some of the objections and be enacted into law at the next session of Congress.

Trade Board Asks Lighted Safety Zones

Girl Killed, Two Hurt Seriously in Day's Traffic Mishaps.

Traffic accidents took one life and injured two persons seriously yesterday.

Other developments on the traffic front were:

Adoption by the traffic committee of the Board of Trade of three resolutions designed to promote safety.

Revocation of one permit and suspension of 19 others for alleged speeding.

Threat of a mandamus suit against Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, made by Teunis F. Collier, Georgetown law crusader, asking that Maj. Brown reveal records of traffic tickets placed on cars parked at Thirtieth street and Dent place.

The day's traffic victim was Mildred M. Meyers, 21, a General Accounting Office worker, killed in an early morning accident in Rockville-Potomac Pike. Her car was forced off the highway by a machine with blinding headlights, skidded on the soft shoulder and hit a telephone pole.

The seriously injured are:

Raymond Peacock, 30, of 1116 E street northeast, whose car collided with a fire truck at Seventh and D streets southwest. He was treated in Emergency Hospital for concussion of the brain and lacerations.

Joseph Brown, colored, 10, of Bladensburg, Md., hurt when he ran into the path of a car near his home. The child was suffering head and internal injuries physicians at Casualty Hospital said.

The Board of Trade committee adopted the following resolutions for submission to District traffic officials:

That the rule providing that no vehicle is to be parked within 25 feet of street intersections shall be more strictly enforced.

That special attention shall be given to enforcing the rule against double parking.

That street-car safety zones shall be illuminated.

The committee's recommendation that a uniform speed limit shall be established for the length of each boulevard or arterial highway through the city precipitated a heated argument. When the recommendation was put to vote it failed to pass by 14 to 20.

One suburban motorist had his right to drive in the District revoked and 19 other out-of-town drivers lost their licenses for temporary periods.

James R. Arnold, of Brentwood, Md., had his permit revoked for speeding 60 miles an hour, while Lloyd O. Stucker, of Martinsburg, W. Va., had his license suspended for 45 days on a charge of second-offense speed of 48 miles.

Thirty-day suspensions went to James S. Brady, Bowie, Md., 44 miles; Thomas J. Clarke, Baltimore, Md., 48 miles; William E. Creecy, Woodside, Md., 42 miles; Joe S. Cullins, Jr., Mount Rainier, Md., 44 miles; Adam H. Davidson, Baltimore, Md., 45 miles; Roy W. Davis, Keyser, W. Va., 50 miles; Frank G. Hunter, Richmond, Va., 50 miles; Walter T. Snead, Silver Hill, Md., 48 miles; Harvey W. Turnage, Silver Hill, Md., 43 miles; Hunter B. Turner, Chevy Chase, Md., 50 miles.

Fifteen-day suspensions went to Albert S. Brown, East Falls Church, Va., 40 miles; Harding Easter, Laurel, Md., 38 miles; Frederick F. Fritzes, Halethorpe, Md., 40 miles; Milton H. Fussell, Swarthmore, Pa., 38 miles; Sol Kline, Baltimore, Md., 38 miles; Reginald B. Looker, Bethesda, Md., 40 miles; Benjamin J. Sager, Front Royal, Va., 38 miles; Felix A. Sparner, Kensington, Md., 38 miles.

Germans Tell Of Automobile Sales Problem

Head of Dealers in Reich Speaks at Luncheon of Washingtonians.

Disclosing that the prohibitive price of gasoline in Germany—30 cents a gallon—is a factor that limits the sale of automobiles, Dr. Walter Fishbach, general manager of the Automobile Dealers of Germany, told a luncheon audience of Washington dealers at the Wardman Park Hotel yesterday that mass production and a ready-buying public puts America far ahead of European countries in the automotive field. Oscar Coolican, president of the Washington Automotive Trade Association, presided.

"While a leading manufacturer of low-price cars in America turns out approximately 5,000 machines a day, a similar plant in Germany can assemble only about 400," he declared.

Dr. Fishbach headed a delegation of 30 German automobile dealers and manufacturers to this country. They had just returned from a tour of the Midwest that included a visit to Detroit and Chicago.

Here they were guests of the Washington Automotive Trade Association and after the lunch they attended the automobile show being held in Calvert Exhibit Hall.

P.U.C. Likely To Approve Bus Service

Takoma Park Action Is Expected as Result of Hearing.

Establishment of a regular Takoma Park express bus service and discontinuance of street car transportation along the route beyond Fourteenth street and Colorado avenue appeared likely yesterday as the Public Utilities Commission began consideration of the mass of testimony submitted during a three-day public hearing.

While the commission will make no decision until after briefs are submitted November 30, observers noted that the preponderance of evidence was in favor of the change from trolleys to buses.

Several subsidiary problems remain to be solved, however, before the commission announces its order. The major ones are:

What route will be selected for the Takoma Park express line?

Will the single track along Third and Kennedy streets be left intact at least until the bus service proves capable of carrying all patrons from Takoma Park?

Three route proposals are before the commission. One was submitted by the Capital Transit Co., a second by a group of citizens associations, and a third by the Ninth street business men.

A compromise routing probably will evolve between the plans suggested by the transit company and the citizens. It is not believed, however, that the Ninth street route will be adopted in lieu of Thirteenth street.

Although Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer stated that lower Thirteenth street has reached a "bus saturation point," the commission has indicated it could reroute some of the other bus lines slightly to make room for Takoma Park buses.

Raleigh Rushes Plans to Open Pall Mall Room

New Night Club to Make Its Bow Tuesday; to Offer Elkins' Orchestra.

By Chanticleer.

They're dusting off the incandescents down at the Raleigh Hotel this week-end in preparation for what appears to be one of the brightest openings on the home-town records in some time. The celebratin' is over the Raleigh's new Pall Mall room.

Eddie Elkins and his orchestra, direct from the Ritz Carlton's Crystal Room and Loper and Hayes, internationally known dance team from Radio City Music Hall, are scheduled for the spotlight, beginning next Tuesday night.

According to the word from the Raleigh, the opening of the Pall Mall Room inaugurates a new policy of name bands and floor entertainment with Sunday concerts from 7 to 9 p. m. The floor will be in three terraces, one level with the dance floor, one arranged for supper clubbing with tables for two, four and six, and the third a cocktail lounge. Color scheme: rose and chromium with column treatment of gun-metal mirrors and ebony bases.

The appearance of Eddie Elkins and his orchestra probably means that a Washington night spot will be heard on the airways again. One of the nets probably will pick up the orchestra for late dance audiences over the terrain.

For the grand opening Tuesday night, the tariff will be $5 per person. After, a 50 cent cover week nights after 10; $1 Saturday nights and holiday nights.

This week marks an eventful milestone in the rosy course of events at Matt Windsor's Club Volga Boatman. Dunya and Kola are back—by popular demand, by Host Windsor's patrons who remembered them so favorably from last season. Dunya and Kola danced at the Volga Boatman for six weeks last winter—a record run. Also returning this week is Anton Garloff, lightning dagger dancer.

• • • •

They say that Peggy Day, piano playing songstress at Maryland Club Gardens, is a "dead ringer" for Mrs. Wallis Simpson. A resemblance so striking that many patrons burst out with their ohs and ahs, involuntarily. She wears her hair a la Simpson, too.

Don't forget this is birthday week at the Lotus, where Bill Strickland and his orchestra are celebrating their third anniversary. And the Al Norton skit on the Martins and McCoys. On the floor: Lenora's Dancing Dolls, the Stanley Trio in some fast moving comedy; Carlos and Carmencita in ballroom dancing; Eleanor Dressel and Louise March, soft shoe and rhythm dances, and Eleanor Knight, modern strut exponent.

You don't need to wait until 8 o'clock, when Paul Tremaine and the orchestra begins its nightly lessons in how smart music should be played, to enjoy musical entertainment at Cocoanut Grove. For at 6:30 the Silver String Revelers entertain and stay on deck until 8. They've done a bit of excellent

Ginger Harris gets the big okay at La Paree this week. She's the little acrobatic and adagio dancing star who entertains under the Bill Behney banner. The adagio is a little in reverse—with two women and a man performing rather than two men and a gal. Behney catches both the femmes at one and the same time! And there are 16 more girls in the Behney chorus. Honey Davis, whose likeness appears elsewhere on this page, is soon to be married. To Andy Knight.

Anne Sigman, No. 2 table tennis champion of the United States, plays her concluding matches at the Shoreham tonight and tomorrow night. Harold Cummings, master of ceremonies, represents the top hat and tiara kind of New York night club interest which the Shoreham finds in demand among its discriminating guests. Still more Broadway in the form of Hazelle and Klatoff, society favorites, who have danced around the world a time or two.

That Cossack number by Orlik and Lolik at the Russian Troika is the most picturesque of the Russian dances done by this team. Long sheepskin hats, Cossack coats, daggers and long spears. Maybe the shashlik and borscht these Russians eat have something to do with it but they are the most energetic performers the nightery has today.

Above, Honey Davis, singing star of Al Sakol's La Paree orchestra, soon is to become Mrs. Andy Knight. Everything is in the spirit of the holiday at La Paree as a result of this announcement. Below, Eddie Elkins, whose orchestra is known to radio audiences the country over, comes from Broadway to open the Raleigh's Pall Mall Room next Tuesday and to remain as its featured attraction for an indefinite period.

Edith Maxwell Defense Funds Top $500 Mark

Post Readers Contribute Cash to Aid Teacher at Second Trial.

The defense fund being raised by Washington Post readers for Edith Maxwell's second trial for the "slipper murder" of Trigg Maxwell, her blacksmith-father, went over the $500 mark yesterday.

Contributions were:
J. M. Bowle	$1.00
Miss Lee	1.00
Anonymous	2.00
	$4.00
Previously reported	498.78
Total	$502.78

A part of this fund is being spent in efforts to have Edith's second trial held in some place other than Wise, Va., the scene of her first trial. It was in Wise, a year ago, that a jury of mountaineers found her guilty of first-degree murder and sentenced her to 25 years in the penitentiary, although she pleaded that she struck her father with a slipper while he was beating her and threatening to kill her.

Whether the second trial will be held in Wise will be determined Monday at a hearing on a motion for a change of venue.

In arguing this motion, Charles Henry Smith, prominent Alexandria attorney, who offered his services to Miss Maxwell when The Post readers went to her rescue, will contend that the girl can't hope for a fair trial in Wise. The publicity and prejudice growing out of the first trial, he will contend, will make it impossible to find an impartial jury.

Judge Ezra Carter, who will preside at the hearing, has asked Attorney Smith to bring into court some of the Wise County citizens who have signed affidavits in favor of a change of venue. He wants to hear from these citizens why they think the trial ought to be moved.

Inclosed find ..... as a contribution to the Edith Maxwell Defense Fund to be used by The Washington Post in her retrial.

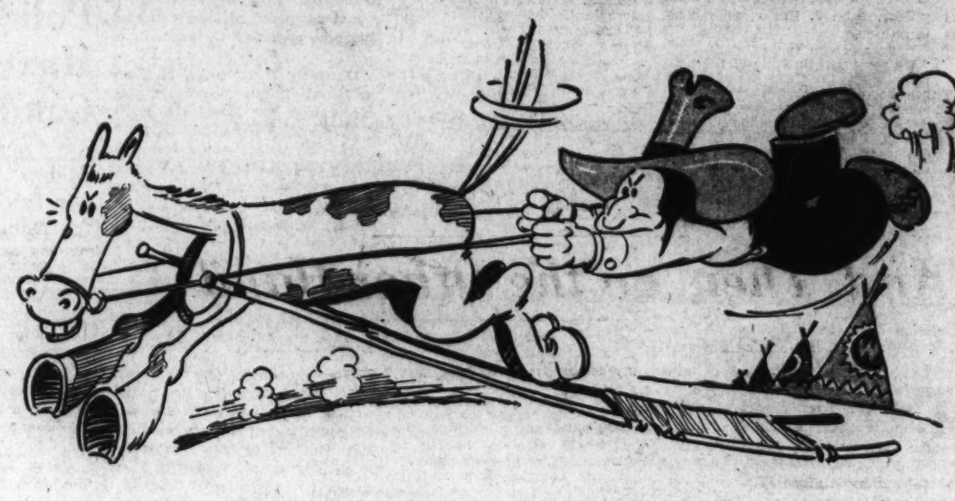
WHOA, AMMONIA!



Hold That Hay-Burner!

● Many horses have left their hoof-prints on history . . . The wooden steed that served as a bus for the Trojan army . . . Dan Patch, the harness champion . . . Equipoise . . . And the horse they named the radish after.

● But equine comedians are rare. And that's what makes Ammonia such an important member of the cast for that hilarious new comic strip, BIG CHIEF WAHOO. Besides serving as a faithful beast of burden for the little chieftain, Ammonia furnishes many a horse laugh on her own.

● She has a head like a bucket, a neck like a broom-stick, a shape like a sack full of hat-racks, a tail like a whisk-broom and feet like beer-kegs. But every time she takes a step she leaves a good-luck sign behind.

● Ammonia is going to gallop across the pages of your newspaper every day, and the thunder of her ponderous hoofs will start a mirth-quake from coast to coast.

Garden Is Set To Approve Louis Bout

Braddock - Louis Fight May Help Garden More Than Promoters.

Jacobs Offers to Make Establishment a Co-Backer of Deal.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 19.—Instead of offering a stumbling block, Madison Square Garden may wind up in the cheering section for the proposed no-decision bout between James J. Braddock and Joe Louis in Atlantic City.

The Garden indicated today it is ready to play ball if the right sort of deal can be made with the co-promoters, Mike Jacobs, of New York, and Herman Taylor, of Philadelphia.

This became known after Jacobs talked with Col. John Reed Kilpatrick, offering to make the Garden a co-promoter and cut it in for a third of the profits.

The colonel didn't say yes, and he didn't say no. He said he would think the thing over and maybe confer with some of his directors.

Guarantee Too Big.

"Col. Kilpatrick thinks we are guaranteeing Braddock too much money. Also, he feels the prices for the ringside seats ($32) are too high," explained Jacobs. "He told me he thought February was the wrong time of year for prices like that."

The Garden is important in the plans of Taylor and Jacobs inasmuch as it has Braddock signed for his first title defense.

"I tried to convince the colonel that it is to the interest of the Garden to come along with us," continued Jacobs. "It is not so much what we make at Atlantic City as what we will make next June when Max Schmeling fights the champion. "If Louis should knock out Braddock, and be hailed as the popular champion, he would draw a million dollars in a return bout with Schmeling. On the other hand, if Braddock can stop Joe, he and Schmeling would be good for twice as much money as they would attract now."

Braddock Claims He'll Flatten Louis

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., Nov. 15.—James J. Braddock hoisted a pair of "brand-new dukes" for inspection tonight and quietly assured his listeners that Madison Square Garden needn't worry.

He'll take Joe Louis like Gen. Grant handled the Richmond incident, said the confident heavyweight champion. Then he'll put up his title for Maxie Schmeling in June.

Braddock, trim and rugged at 195 pounds, said he would leave Dallas immediately after refereeing a fight tonight and return to Hot Springs, Ark., for the finishing touches of a treatment he said had chased traces of arthritis from his hands.

The champion was eager to hear the latest developments from New York, where efforts to cinch a proposed scrap with Joe Louis at Atlantic City in February are being made. Madison Square Garden, holders of Braddock's title contract, has not yet agreed to the 12-round no-decision exhibition jointly promoted by Herman Taylor and Mike Jacobs.

"What's the Garden got to lose on the Louis fight?" queried Braddock. "I'll whip him.

"It doesn't make any difference to me, however, whether I fight Louis or Schmeling. Yes, that guarantee for the Louis fight is very attractive."

All-Sports Banquet To Cite D.C. Stars

Washington's outstanding college athlete; Washington's greatest high school athlete and Washington's foremost prep school athlete will be paid tribute at the Touchdown Club's All-Sports banquet on December 9 at the Willard Hotel.

A committee selected to name these athletes will make their decisions known at that time and each will be presented with a trophy.

At a meeting of the banquet committee last night, plans were made to reserve special sections for members of Washington civic groups. The Lions Club, the Board of Trade and the Congressional Club have already requested reservations.

A two-hour entertainment program featuring the stage shows of Washington theaters will follow the dinner and the presentation of awards.

Miami Not Insulted At Refusal of Pitt

Miami, Fla., Nov. 19 (U.P.).—Miami businessmen, who annually sponsor the Orange Bowl football classic here New Year's Day, were undiscouraged tonight by Pitt's refusal to represent the North and said they preferred Marquette anyhow.

The bowl committee said it had received no official response from Pittsburgh, but Ernie Seiler, who handles the committee's correspondence, said he read a statement in newspapers from W. Don Harrison, Pitt athletic director, declining the invitation.

The businessmen regarded Pitt's refusal with a "well-I-like-that" air. They said they preferred Marquette's unbeaten, untied Golden Avalanche from the North and gave the impression that if Tennessee would represent the South, the Orange Bowl game would be "a natural."

Hoyas' Hopes of Beating Terps Fall as Two Regulars Are Lost

Herb Stadler, Al Snyder, Hurt in Manhattan Tilt, Will Be Out.

Georgetown's hopes of winning over Maryland tomorrow were dealt a crushing blow last night when it was learned that Al Snyder, ace end, and Herby Stadler, guard, whose play has been an important factor in the team's success, will not play because of injuries suffered in the Manhattan game last week.

Snyder, while not seriously injured as believed at first when it was feared that he had a fractured vertebrae, is too badly bruised and battered to face the Terrapins. He has not been in uniform this week, much less practicing with the squad.

Stadler, a tower of strength defensively and human ramrod on the offense, emerged from the Jasper fray with an ailing knee. He tried to hobble through practice, but found it impossible to continue and was forced to the sidelines. His place will be filled by 168-pound Lew Shuker, a dependable reserve, who has been a reserve only because of Stadler's presence on the squad.

Maury Nee, the local boy who is making good for the Hoyas, has been assigned to Snyder's position. Nee is a good ball player in his own

Tony Barabas, last of a line of football-playing brothers who starred at Georgetown and Columbia, who has blossomed as perhaps the best of the current Georgetown backs. He will make his appearance in the game against Maryland tomorrow whenever Coach Haggerty deems his team in scoring position.

And, Then, on the Other Hand . . .

By Shirley Povich.

With all the impetuosity of youth, my tendered colleague, Lew Atchison, is rushing into print in a neighboring column this morning with the prediction that Georgetown will beat Maryland, come tomorrow afternoon.

A strong-willed fellow, that Atchison, who refused to be dissuaded, much like another young man across the seas you may know by the name of King Edward VII. And when Atchison foresees a Georgetown victory over Maryland, he, again like King Edward, is romancing.

Sure, Georgetown may win, and the world may come to an end tomorrow; Mrs. Stalin may elope with Hitler; Petey Sarron may kayo Joe Louis, and Roosevelt may appoint an all-Republican cabinet. But pardon me if I dissent.

All Georgetown has to do to win the game is to intercept the pass from the Maryland center to Bill Guckeyson. That's one way of stopping him—in fact, the only way. But woe to the Hoyas if something, perchance, goes awry and Guckeyson gets his hands on the ball.

G. U. May Go Down Fighting.

Then will ensue the greatest display of ball carrying Georgetown has faced all season. Sans blockers, this Guckeyscn steps off the yards with all the certainty of a referee penalizing somebody half the distance to the goal. With that Maryland blocking he will be getting tomorrow, well, Georgetown will probably go down fighting, anyway.

And I hear, too, that Guckeyson was out there at College Park yesterday in practice booting drop kicks between the posts from 40 yards out as calmly as you please, if that's any comfort to Georgetown.

I don't like to pile it on, but there's another Maryland chap named Jim Meade who won't be trifling when he hits that Georgetown line. And two lads named Coleman Headley and Charley Ellinger are anything but statuesque when that ball is snapped. Georgetown must pay them heed and at the same time watch Guckeyson.

Speaking of Backs.

The Hoyas will see a lot of these Maryland backs—or maybe it is better said that the Hoyas will see a lot of the backs of these Maryland backs. Man for man they outshine the Georgetown ball carriers like an Army searchlight outshines a tallow candle.

Personally, I'm impatient with those Georgetown ball carriers. One week it's Keating who's their All-American candidate. The next week it's Valiquette, and Keating has been lost in the shuffle, or something, after a drab performance. The next week it's Barabas and both Keating and Valiquette are forgotten. What is it, a game?

It won't be a game out there at College Park tomorrow unless Guckeyson, Meade et al. come down with the ague or something before game time—it'll be an exhibition. Nice lads, those Georgetown boys—but they're overmatched.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

So Maryland is gonna take Georgetown apart tomorrow and see what makes it click, eh Povich? The Terps are going to walk all over 'em and make them look like a bunch of third-rate sandlotters, eh? Well, if that's your story you take it with you—way out there on that little limb you've leased for the season. It will be interesting reading matter until about 5 p. m. tomorrow, after that it'll be good stuff for your memoirs.

When you sit down and write Maryland's going to beat Georgetown it's high time you moved away from that leaky radiator. The heat's getting you. You sound like you've been talking to Bill McCormick. You know how he picks those fights.

Maryland has a good ball club, granted, but in this case, I think Georgetown to be better—not slightly, but a whole lot better. Maryland has plenty of good backs and two outstanding ball carriers in Bill Guckeyson and Jim Meade, again granted, but Georgetown has some good backs, even if we reporters haven't devoted reams of copy to their exploits.

Maryland's line is good, too, I'll concede you another point, and the Terrapins undoubtedly will have the advantage in punting, but—hold on here, I'm building up the wrong case.

How About G. U. Lines.

Have you seen Georgetown's lines, both of 'em? Have you seen its backs in action, and do you know exactly what they're capable of? Do you know the spirit in which the Hoyas approach this pigskin party?

Guckeyson isn't going to get away for any of those 60-yard touchdown runs tomorrow, and Meade isn't going to hop, skip and jump through the line. If you recall, "Gike" got through the line only once last year, and this one actually is at least 25 per cent better than its predecessor. He isn't going through Georgetown's line, but the Hoyas are going through Maryland's and that will be their avenue to victory.

Georgetown's backs aren't the worst in the world, in fact, Tommy Keating rates as the smartest quarterback in this vicinity in my book. When this boy finishes crossing up Maryland's secondary it won't know whether it's playing football or ring-around-rosy. Take Tony Barabas, too, and I know you'd like to have him, if he gets out in the open—and he can—it is good-by Maryland.

Sh-h-h! No Laterals by G. U.

Maryland probably will be all set to stop Georgetown's laterals, so Keating will not throw any. When the Terps try to gang up on the running attack, Keating will heave a pass to one of the halfbacks and when they drop back to cover up on passes, he'll send Duff hurtling off tackle for 5 or 6 yards. It is between the tackles where Georgetown will make its presence felt most—and Maryland certainly will feel it.

I look for Georgetown to outsmart Maryland and to outplay it, and I look for Maryland to be caught in the backwash of its own strategy, for Georgetown is going out tomorrow to play the brand of football it exhibited against West Virginia.

If it does, it's gonna be awfully cold out there on that limb, Povich.

Schmidt Denies Bid To Coach at Texas

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 19 (AP).—Coach Francis A. Schmidt, of Ohio State University's football squad, disclosed today that an alumnus of the University of Texas had inquired if he would consider becoming coach at Texas.

Schmidt termed the matter "much ado about nothing," and denied he had received or rejected any "offer" from Texas University authorities.

New York, Nov. 19 (U.P.).—Columbia will play nine football games in 1937, according to the schedule announced today.

The schedule:

October 2, Williams, at New York; 9, Army, at West Point; 16, Pennsylvania, at New York; 23, Brown, at New York; 30, Cornell, at Ithaca.

November 6, Navy, at Annapolis; 13, Syracuse, at New York; 20, Dartmouth, at New York; 27, Stanford, at New York.

Alban's Beats Landon.

St. Alban's School defeated Landon Prep in two football games yesterday. The 70-pound class team trounced Landon's 70-pounders, 14-0, and the 100-pounders also won, 13-0. Quarterback Billy Miller scored both touchdowns for the 70-pounders and got loose for a 50-yard run at one time. Quarterback Wick scored both touchdowns for the 100-pounders.

Colonials at Peak For West Virginia

Providing the injury jinx maintains its absence from the premises, which has been cause for rejoicing during the past week, George Washington's football team will be at full strength when it meets West Virginia Thanksgiving Day in Griffith Stadium.

With Guy Renzaglia, fiery little guard, returning today to practice following a lay-off due to a foot injury, the Colonials figure to be at their peak physically when they seek to close the most successful season in the school's recent history. The occasion will mark the fifth annual home-coming celebration, and, among other things the Colonials hope to disport themselves advantageously for the benefit of the returning old grads.

Colleges Ask New Sports Survey

A Second Report by the Carnegie Foundation Sought in Meeting.

Oklahoma U. President Makes Request; No Decision Made.

By the United Press.

Austin, Tex., Nov. 19.—The annual meeting of the National Association of State Universities today adopted a resolution that a new survey of intercollegiate sports be made by the Carnegie Foundation.

The request was telegraphed to the foundation in New York. The proposal was introduced by Dr. W. W. Bizzell, president of the University of Oklahoma, who said he offered the resolution because he believed college sports should be participated in by bono fide students because of their interest in sports and not because of any financial rewards that may be held out to them.

In New York, Dr. Howard J. Savage, of the Carnegie Foundation, said a telegram had been received, but that the organization's executive committee first would have to act on such a request.

"It is highy complimentary of the association to ask us to do more work in the field," he said.

Cards' Victory Hopes Take Tumble

Catholic University's hopes of stopping Western Maryland tomorrow sagged lower than a broken bedspring last night when Bill Adamaitis, its ace pass flinger, was definitely ruled out of the fray because of an ailing ankle. The game will be the Cards' last of the season.

Adamaitis, who has been the mainspring of the Cards' attack, joins "Irish" Carroll on the sidelines, and their combined absence from the ball-carrying department put a definite crimp in the team's hopes. Carroll is out with a severe charleyhorse.

Burke Vidnovic, the hard-running sophomore who has delivered on all public appearances this season, will take over Adamaitis' assignment, with Joe Glodek moving down from fullback to halfback to help out with the attack. "Spec" Foley, quarterback, and Bud Munhall will round out the starting backfield.

This will be the first time that Coach "Dutch" Bergman has not started an all-senior line-up, or one predominantly senior, in the final game for a number of years as is his usual custom.

Army-Navy Game Is a Sellout Plus

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 19.—With the number of seats for the Army-Navy football allotted to each service increased by more than 21,000 over last year, there has been no lessening of the strain upon the officials at each academy charged with the distribution.

The number of available seats at the Philadelphia Municipal Stadium, where the game will be played, is 102,000 equally divided between the naval and military academies. However, the 51,000 assigned to the Navy have all been distributed, with requests for 30,000 on file which cannot be granted. It is also known here that the Army's quota was oversubscribed by more than 15,000.

That Kelley Man Is Shy Soul When Off Field

By Paul Mickelson.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 19.—A sailor started it all in the back yard of the Kelley home in Williamsport, Pa.

Coach Tom Hamilton and his Navy lads can shout treason and make the most of it, but it was a tar who first took Larry Kelley aside, got him football conscious, taught him how to catch the pigskin and most probably drilled him in the art of wisecracking that has made him the most publicized man of the college gridiron world.

"The sailor said I ought to be a football player," recalled the great end and captain of Yale's Big Blues, "so I thought the same thing. He drilled me for hours on blocking and pass catching. Maybe I got some of his philosophy, too. Anyway, I became an end and I've always wanted to be a halfback."

Like all great men, Loquacious Larry, who didn't start playing football until he was a senior in Williamsport High, met with discouragement at the outset. The first pass he caught knocked him on his face. One day, in practice, he missed an easy tackle and his prep coach yelled:

"So you wanta be a college football player, huh? Kelley, the only way you'll see college football is to pay your way into the stands."

"And," mused Lawrence Morgan Kelley, "after a bum game I've often thought it might be a good idea for me to look up the ticket seller and pay him for the privilege of getting on the field at all. I felt that way in the Dartmouth game last year. I was awful."

Kelley truly is the Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde of football on the field, when the heat is whitest, he is the master of chicanery and wisecracking—the most dangerous possum in the business. Away from the tumult and shouting of the crowds and dressing rooms, he's quiet, refined and a shrinking violet. In calm tones, he'll deny nine-tenths of the wisecracks attributed to him, dismissing them as a "lot of newspaper gags."

"The boys like to have some fun, I suppose," he said, "and it's okay with me. Nine-tenths of the wisecracks credited to me are not true. You fellows think up a good line and just hang it on me."

Kelley, an honor student who majors in American history and who helps make football history for Yale on Saturday afternoons, says his greatest satisfaction and thrill was his ability to score against Princeton in all three games he played against the Tiger. He also has scored in each game against Harvard, but needs one Saturday to keep his record intact.

Kelley, who estimates he can stop a pass with the palm of his hand at the height of 10 feet, also needs a touchdown against the Harvards to keep his annual scoring record of five touchdowns a season.

$30,000 Is Refused For Derby Hopeful

By the Associated Press.

Arlington Downs, Tex., Nov. 19. Satisfied he has just the "kind of horse we've been trying to get for years," E. Paul Waggoner of the Three D's stock farm today refused $30,000 for Heeldy and eagerly looked toward the Kentucky Derby.

Picard Bows To Thomson In Upset

Smith Stages Rally to Win; Wood, Shute Also Advance.

Melhorn, Hines Other Survivors in Play at Pinehurst.

By Dave Herman.
A Staff Correspondent.

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 19.—Open Champion Tony Manero put on a real scoring rally in eliminating wee Bobby Cruickshank, 4 and 3, in the third round of the National P. G. A. championship here today. One under par for the 33 holes the match lasted, Manero was the only one of eight survivors to record a sub-par performance.

Washington's big hope, Leo Walper, the Bethesda driving range instructor, was eliminated by Harold McSpaden, husky Boston professional, 4 and 3, despite Walper's gallant fight to keep the match alive on the last nine. You can't beat miraculous putting, and that's just what McSpaden was serving up all day.

Jimmy Thomson, whose Babe Ruthish tee shots have been making his second shots look simple, continued to run true to form, upsetting Henry Picard, the Hershey Hurricane, and tourney favorite, 4 and 2, in what had been booked as the day's feature.

Thomson wound up his battle with Picard on the thirty-fourth hole only 1 over par, which is grand golf, but not touching the sterling play of Manero.

Five other professionals whose names are synonymous with golf reached the quarterfinals.

They were Horton Smith, the celebrated Joplin ghost, who staged a comeback few in the gallery—and Smith himself—will ever forget; Craig Wood, 1934 finalists; Denny Shute, former British open champion, a P. G. A. finalist in 1931; "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn and Jimmy Hines, Garden City, N. Y., sensation.

Great Rally for Smith.

Smith, once 5 down to Willie Goggin, sure-fire shooter from San Bruno, Calif., emerged from the wilderness of defeat with a breath-taking rally to win, 2 and 1. In so doing he was forced to negotiate the last 17 holes in 2 under par.

By the same count Wood removed the jittery "Lighthorse Harry" Cooper, 2 and 1, in a veritable hole-for-hole dog fight.

Mehlhorn and Hines won their matches rather easily. "Wild Bill" scored the most crushing defeat of the day by routing towering Ed

Aneroid, 3 to 2, Romps to 7-Length Victory in Bowie Sprint

Watson Gets Choice Home With Ease

Draws Away in Stretch; Faust Pilots Rough Party to Victory.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 19.—Aneroid, a son of The Porter made a rout of The Tench Handicap which featured today's program at this Prince Georges County race track. The 3-year-old with Jockey R. Watson in the saddle, bounded to the finish line six lengths in advance of Wha Hae which headed Billy Bee out of second money. Aneroid was operating in the role of a $5.10 favorite and his time of 1:12 3-5 was the best for six furlongs at this meeting.

A bright sun and the absence of wind made it a fairly comfortable day for the 8,000 participating in the sport.

Aneroid was first to show in front when Starter Milton gave the gateway bell. However, Watson chose not to try to outrun Wha Hae and Brannon but rated his mount along with that pair. The three were about a length and a half ahead of Billy Bee. Swinging for the stretch, the trio in front was closely bunched.

It was nearing the final bend that Watson began to turn his mount loose. The colt responded with a burst of speed that soon established him as the leader. From that point to the wire it was a question of how far Watson chose to make the winning distance.

The outside horse was given a nose decision in one of the closest finishes of the meeting after the judges had consulted the negative. Danarco, a $12.30 shot, came up on the outside to be abreast of Bugle Ann at the finish line. Eruption was third, a length and a half away. Bugle Ann set the pace from the beginning, but Danarco developed a drive in the stretch that brought victory. A field of a dozen juveniles contested at 6 furlongs and the winner's time was 1:15.

J. Yancey Christmas, of Upper Marlboro, Md., saddled Rough Party, the winner of the second race. Jockey Freddie Faust, of Washington, did a good job of riding. He brought Rough Party through on the rail and held a nose advantage over My Surprise at the finish. Third money in the field of seven went to Dancing Doll. The

Colored Amateurs Start Gloves Bouts

Preliminary bouts in the colored Golden Gloves boxing contests were held last night at the Twelfth Street Young Men's Christian Association, where Maj. Harvey Miller, secretary of the boxing commission, and officials of the Amateur Athletic Union, joined a fair-sized crowd in watching two and three round bouts.

"Jay-bo" Kenner, 201, seemed the most likely offering of the evening. Matched against Henry Johnson, 186, he won a decision after two minutes in which Johnson twice hit the canvas, and never landed a blow.

In the middleweight class, Joe Drake won over Xander Ingram, the latter taking a dive after 45 seconds during all of which the first strenuous mixup lasted.

Marshall Mays, 151, lost on a foul to Stan Marshall, 152, after the latter had taken the first round, exhibiting a wicked left, and dropped the other two rounds. Mays struck him while he was on the canvas, and Referee Sawyer immediately raised the fallen man's hand in token of the decision.

Jim Frisco, 140, defeated Jim Edge, 136, after Edge had exhausted himself in the first two minutes.

Especilly interesting was the midget bout between "Sheepy" Porter, a scientific boxer weighing 71 pounds, and Harrison Burr, 61, which was declared a draw. Johnny Hall, 73, and "Thunderbolt" Queen, exhibited two rounds of fast and furious boxing to no decision.

Al Spencer, 127, decisioned Lewis Hing, 127, in the third, as did Joe Graves, 128, meeting Allen Walker, 125.

In a welterweight bout between Jim Gray, 143, and Joe Walker, 141, Walker quit after 2 minutes, stepping out of the ring.

DANARCO, within striking distance of the leaders from the beginning, rallied when placed to drive entering the stretch and was up in the concluding strides. BUGLE ANN, off alertly, shook off EXHORT while setting the pace, saved ground and tired suddenly approaching the end. ERUPTION gained steadily throughout the running and closed willingly. TRUE TUNE was a forward factor throughout, but could not menace in the stretch. EXHORT was used up chasing the pace. BIB gained sharply in the early stretch.

ROUGH PARTY, not hurried during the early running, came through on the rail entering the stretch to save ground and withstood a long drive to barely outlast MY SURPRISE. MINEY MYERSON sprinted to the front at once and continued gamely, but unable to stay in the closing sixteenth. DANCING DOLL was off slowly, gained on the outside in the opening quarter, but hung thereafter. BELLUM showed a dull effort. REMOLINO, last out of the gates, went to the leaders with a rush approaching the stretch, and was drawing clear of CLINGENDALL at the finish. The latter, forwardly placed throughout, closed willingly, but was unable to resist the winner. THE RUNNER came from far back to close with good energy. CARNARVON opened a long lead, but was tiring rapidly in the final eighth. DUEL closed resolutely. MY ELSIE dropped out of it early. CAREFUL MISS could not keep up.

"You should see me bowl—I can't wait 'till I get out and get a ball in my hand."

with Bill Bennings.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 19.

Dear Al:

Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons was around this morning. He says that the firing irons have been used on Granville's legs and the 3-year-old ace is doing nicely and will be ready to resume his career next spring. Yancey Christmas reports that the clockers were wrong when they reported that Rough Party bled after a workout yesterday morning. Rough Party worked with Gold Clip and it was the latter that pulled up ailing. The clockers believed the pair to be Rough Party and Rough Time. The horses of the Ascot Stable will be sold at auction in the paddock tomorrow morning. A. L. Aste, the owner, is retiring from racing after 35 years. He says he's disgusted with the way racing is conducted. Not even that "triple" victory here earlier in the week has changed his mind. Ira Hanford is leading the jockeys at this meeting. Like the man who drove a dirt wagon for 20 years without a vacation, and then, upon being given a day off, got up early in the morning to go to the stable to see them hitch up the horses, Walter O'Hara, president of the Narragansett Park track, is a daily visitor here following his long and successful season in New England. It must be a relief to O'Hara to sit in the stands, bet a few bucks and not have the worries of the whole show hanging on his shoulders. Charles Town has an overflow of stall applications for the meeting which opens November 30. Horsemen had to be begged to ship their charges to the West Virginia track when the course first went into business. Now some of the same trainers are begging to be allowed to send their horses to the mountain plant.

BILL.

First race—Harvesting has shown enough to warrant a top selection in this field of maidens. He can better that last, I believe. Ptolemy and Abbot's Hour hold good chances and will battle it out if the top one makes mistakes.

Second race—Aroused picks up 114 pounds for this test but has a class edge on the company. Good handling should bring us a win mutuel. Apprehend showed a fair last out and gets in with steadying weight. Masked Gal should like the track and is dangerous.

Third race—Sleek won that last impressively and needs only to repeat that effort to score. I'm going to string along. Chrysmute is at home in the company. Xandra should be along in time to take the show money.

Fourth race—Sir Randolph and Uvalde promise to battle it out for the chief award in this field. Both are at tops as shown by those recent outings. Tellwick is a brisk worker and could spring an upset.

Fifth race—Scatter Brain, despite high weight, gets my call in this field. I have reason to believe that this stable will be shooting. Shoeless Joe has plenty of speed and is a threat. Furfiber for the show end.

Sixth race—Pomposity likes this soft track and should show to advantage in this group and at the route. Jim John promises to be a keen factor. Naval Cadet was trying his best last out and off that effort should be at least third.

Seventh race—Blind Brook, on the also eligible list, will be hard to beat if he sees action. Strategist II and Live One for the place and show awards.

Best bet—Scatter Brain.

1—Harvesting, Marfeu, Lucky Roll.
2—Twidgets, Masked Gal, Apprehend.
3—Xandra, Peppery, Sleek.
4—Compliment, Uvalde, Sir Randolph.
5—Master Lad, Angus, Teddy Haslam.
6—Naval Cadet, Jim John, Standout.
7—Strategist II, Flag of War, Ashen.
Best bet—Master Lad.

Underdog Roosevelt May Give McKinley Team Tough Battle

Tech Is Heavy Favorite to Win Title

Rough Riders Will Rely on Passes in Final Game of Series.

0—Eastern	0	0—Geo. Wash.	0

Ready to gamble desperately for touchdowns, Roosevelt High's last-place team collides with Tech's first-place team in Tech Stadium at 3:15 p. m. today in the last interhigh series game of the season. Only by a miracle can the Rough Riders apparently upset the gray-clad gridmen and keep them from the interhigh championship won last year by Central.

Topheavy favorites to win by a good margin, the Techmen are unbeaten in the series, whereas Roosevelt has yet to win a game. On the other hand, Roosevelt supporters point out that the Rough Riders scored against the strong Western team, though losing, 19-6, while Western clearly outplayed Tech, though losing on a runback of a punt.

Roosevelt backers also add that Eastern had a tough time beating Roosevelt, 13-0, scoring one touchdown on a blocked kick, which should never have been called, and then Eastern turned around and made things uncomfortable for Tech in a 0-0 tie.

With its running game nothing in particular to rave about, Roosevelt is likely to concentrate on its passing attack. Tech's line, however, disclosed considerable weakness, especially in the guard region, in some games. The Roosevelt coaching staff has not disregarded it and it is highly possible that the Rough Riders may gain more ground on running plays today than they have in the other three games put together.

Roosevelt will be handicapped severely by the loss of Eddie Vasvary, star guard, and the team's outstanding candidate for All-High.

Brewers Hold Leadership

The Washington Brewery team remained secure atop the District League last night at the Convention Hall alleys, successfully halting the challenge of Occidental Restaurant by gaining an odd-game victory.

George Honey inserted the needed punch, pounding the maples for a 150 game. Astor Clarke, waging a hot battle with Ollie Pacini for high individual average honors, overhauled the Brewery anchor man with a 394 set.

Rose Liquor established itself as the real contender for the flag, pulling up to within striking distance of the No. 1 position with two wins over Georgetown. The victors met with considerable opposition in the last game, winning, 643 to 634. Tom Kinnahan featured the match with a 155 game and 409 set, the best individual effort of the night.

Heurichs moved into third place by downing Convention Hall twice, a 603 game giving the Hallmen their only win in their last effort.

Lucky Strike humbled Arcadia two games, aided by Billie LaBille's 145 game and 390 set.

R. F. C.'s position at the top of the Ladies' Federal Loop can be traced to the efforts of Margaret Lynn. Mrs. Lynn is leading the league with a high individual average of 109. Last night her average went soaring still higher when she chalked up a 148 game and 373 set to give her team a clean sweep over Federal Housing.

Four teams are waging a real battle for the supremacy of the Department Store League, Woodward, Kann, Palais Royal and Lansburgh leading the loop with but two games separating first and fourth places. The race was tightened last night when the defending champion Kann took two games from Woodward & Lothrop. Palais Royal remained in a tie for second place by taking the odd game from the Hecht Co., and Lansburgh strengthened its position with two wins over Raleigh Haberdasher.

Ed Schlagel chipped in with a 142 game to give Bunker Hill a season record game of 595 in the American League at Lucky Strike . . . Grimes' 379 set enabled Kenneth Nash Post to swamp Agriculture Post, No. 36, three games . . . Lois Helmerick's 120 topped the individual feats in the Ladies Procurement League, while the leading Pinettes defeated Empire

Nears P.G.A. Title

TONY MANERO, National Open golf champion, who defeated Bobby Cruickshank in the National Pro Golf Tournament at Pinehurst yesterday and remained as one of the eight survivors in the tourney.

Walper Beaten In Pinehurst Golf Play

Dudley, of Philadelphia, 6 and 4, while the sandy-haired Hines trimmed Vic Ghezzi, Deal, N. J., ace, 4 and 2.

Thus the stage was set for the following battles tomorrow:

Thomson engages McSpaden, Wood meets Manero, Smith opposes Shute and Mehlhorn takes on Hines.

Walper, the only unknown among the 16 starters today, failed to shoot the golf that won him his first two matches. He held on nicely for the first nine, permitting McSpaden to take the lead at the turn, when his tee shot found a trap on the short ninth. He lost the hole with a 4 to a par 3, going out in 39 to the Boston pro's 38, and finding himself one down at the tenth.

Walper caught McSpaden at the twelfth with a par 4, but 3-putted the thirteenth for a loss, dropped the sixteenth to McSpaden's birdie 4; the seventeenth, when his tee shot landed in a trap, and the eighteenth with a 5 to a 4.

Four down at the end of 18 holes—that was the handicap that Walper faced as he teed off in the afternoon. He went five down at the eighteenth, and reached the twenty-eighth four down. McSpaden took a six on that hole, and lost to Leo's par five. Three down Walper dropped the thirtieth when McSpaden, trapped in two, holed a 15-footer for a four. Walper took the thirty-first, but the heartbreaker came on the thirty-second. Here Walper played a beautiful second to reach the green. McSpaden's second landed on the edge of a bunker, 60 feet from the pin. Using a putter, McSpaden rolled the ball into the cup for a birdie three with the flag unremoved. That beat Walper, making the match dormie. It was all over on the next hole.

Was Five Down.

Horton Smith probably wouldn't have given a dime for his chances at the halfway mark of his match with Goggin. At that point, Horton was five down, having taken a ragged 77 to the Californian's even par 72.

Smith called on his putting magic during his nightcap journey. He was even 4s from the nineteenth through the twenty-seventh, but still was 2 down.

Horton won the twenty-ninth. He saved himself a half with a 15-foot putt for a 4 on the next hole, and on the thirty-first laid his second stoney for a birdie 3 to square the match. That was the spark that set off the Smith machine. He won the thirty-second with a par 4 to go 1 up for the first time, and on the thirty-third, a 204-yarder, the world's No. 1 putter, meaning Mr. Smith, employed his chipper and nailed a 40-footer for a birdie deuce to hang the proverbial millstone around Mr. Goggin's neck.

The cards:

Colored Welters On Ring Program

Colored welterweights who have made good locally have been matched on the ring card jointly gotten toghether by Promoter Earl McDonald and Matchmaker Walter Young for Joe Turner's Arena Wednesday night.

While the ten-round matching of Gene Buffalo and Lambertine Williams, knock-out conqueror of Bill Eley, stands out, other dusky warriors just as colorful have been chartered.

Biby Kid Chocolate, Atlantic City's 146-pound replica of the Cuban bonbon, is being brought back by special arrangement to war eight rounds with lightning-fast Billy Cross, while Kid Howie, Alexandria's prospect, moves up a notch in six-round competition with the veteran and cagey Johnny Johnson.

Attempting to add a final touch of polish to a rather inauspicious record, Eastern High's football team will bring to a close its nine-game schedule this afternoon when it meets a potentionally great Devitt eleven in the Eastern stadium.

In past years composed of unknown out-of-town performers, the Devitt squad this year smarts of local interest in that it is comprised of players who at one time starred for a high school in the District and one Lee Fones, last year's All-State fullback—from George Washington High in Alexandria.

Eastern, with four wins, one tie and three losses, closed its interhigh schedule with a brilliant scoreless tie with McKinley, who needs only a win over Roosevelt this afternoon to claim the title, and, in spite of the fact that only the Roughriders separate them from the basement, the Lincoln Parkers are not expected to be an easy addition to the prepmen's win column.

McLarnin Held Choice Over Ambers

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 19.—Jimmy McLarnin, Vancouver Irishman and former welterweight champion, will make the second start in his comeback campaign tomorrow night when he takes on Lou Ambers, king of the lightweights in a ten-round engagement in Madison Square Garden.

McLarnin's experience, superior punching and a 10-pound weight advantage have made him an 8-to-5 favorite with the money players, with plenty of Amber takers.

Against McLarnin's ring generalship and hitting ability, Ambers will pit youth, speed and a busy, if not deadly, two-fisted attack. The Herkimer lad throws the leather from all angles and directions. He doesn't score many kayos, but his unorthodox style and willingness to mix every minute of the time give his opponents plenty of trouble.

It will be Ambers' second start since winning the crown from Tony Canzoneri in September. Three weeks ago he dropped an over-the-weight decision to Eddie Cool in Philadelphia.

right, steady and dependable, but Snyder has played an inspired game throughout the campaign and his presence will be sorely missed.

The rest of the squad, although still feeling the affects of its defeat by Manhattan, will be ready for the opening whistle, even if not in the best physical condition. The team was sent through its last strenuous workout in preparation for the city's lone major grid classic yesterday and this afternoon will be devoted to polishing off work.

Coach Jack Hagerty last night announced his starting line-up, revised for the second time in a week, with a single change in the backfield in addition to the two line alterations mentioned above. Bob Nolan will start at halfback instead of Joe Keegin, teaming with Bill Valliquette. His presence behind the line is expected to give the ball carriers better blocking and to materially strengthen the defense.

Tom Keating will direct the field operations with Bill Duff doing the fullbacking and punting. The line will be comprised of Nee and Williams, ends; Vaccarro and Stralka, tackles; Shuker and Hill, guards, and Hardy center.

Cox Decisions Garibaldi, (Maybe)

Another Finish Wrinkle Enlivens Wrestling at Turner's.

By Bill McCormick.

Joe Cox, the Kansas City Kutup, and Gino Garibaldi terminated their wrestling match at Turner's Arena last night in a new wrinkle that provided a perfect "teaser" for a return engagament. The winner had been promised a shot at heavyweight title claimant Cliff Olson, but it would seem inevitable that Josey and Gino will have it out again before Clifford is called into the picture.

Cox was declared the winner of last night's encounter, but neither Garibaldi nor the 1,500 spectators could be persuaded that he had legitimately downed Gino. The official finish came after 34½ minutes of rough and tumble when Referee Benjamin Bortnick inserted his pear-shaped tummy between the two burpers to break an alleged strangle hold which Gino had clamped about Cox's 18¾-inch neck.

Not Nice Boys.

After heaving and shoving his midsection between the two, Bortnick finally succeeded in prying them apart and he was dragging Garibaldi across the ring when Cox smacked Gino smack-dab on the kisser. Gino squashed to the mat and Cox quickly clambered aboard his prostrate form while Bortnick as quickly gave Garibaldi the necessary "1, 2, 3" count which made Joe the winnah.

After the formalities were over, there ensued the almost inevitable postbout brawl, with Gino flopping Cox thither and yon about the ring with body slams, smacking Bortnick in the puss and otherwise wasting a lot of energy to substantiate his claim that he had been hit when Bortnick had him defenseless and that he hadn't been down when Bennah counted him out anyway.

At this juncture an overenthusiastic customer entered the ring to take a hand and got a nice sock on the jaw and a kick in the stomach instead.

Even then Gino was not satisfied, but remained in the ring for many minutes as the customers stayed within the arena to applaud him. After a while, Bortnick re-entered the ring, with Cox in tow, and it looked as though the thing was to start all over again, but just outside the ropes Joe was almost floored by a Garbaldi leer, so he fled back to the dressing room, leaving Garibaldi no alternative but to wait for the rematch to get his revenge.

In a semifinal scheduled for 30 minutes, George McLeod tossed Pat McKay in 12 minutes.

Copious Parking Space Provided at Maryland

Free parking space will be provided fans attending the Georgetown-Maryland game tomorrow at College Park, Old Line officials announced last night. The huge field directly east of the stadium, the Terps' practice field, will be used for parking purposes.

It may be reached by the road running along the north side of Ritchie Coliseum and the baseball stands, or by going down College avenue, the main street in College Park, to Dickinson avenue and turning left. Signs will be erected to direct the autoist. Guides also will be on the job.

Gold Reserve 11.127 Billion, Highest to Date

Excess Funds of Member Banks Increase 10 Million.

By the Associated Press.

Excess reserves of member banks were estimated by the Federal Reserve Board last night at $2,270,000,000 on November 18, an increase of $10,000,000 for the week.

Excess reserves, which provide the basis for credit expansion, have been mounting since reserve requirements were raised 50 per cent on August 15, showing a total increase of $418,000,000 since that date.

The increase last week was attributable in part to a $22,000,000 increase in monetary gold stock, pushing this item to a new high of $11,127,000,000, and in part to slight increases in nonmember deposits and Treasury cash and deposits.

Two methods are available to the Federal Reserve Board should it desire a reduction in excess reserves to prevent a "runaway" credit expansion.

It either could increase reserve requirements again—thus tying up more of the banks' funds as a reserve behind their deposits—or through its open market committee could sell Government obligations. Many of these Government securities would be bought by the banks with their present excess funds.

Asked whether he would approve a Federal Reserve move to sell Government securities on the open market if one were suggested, Secretary Morgenthau said he would have no opinion unless such a course was actually projected.

Ford of Canada Goes On $1 a Year Basis

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 19 (AP).—Because of increased earnings in 1936 over the previous year, and an improved general business outlook, directors of Ford Motor Co. of Canada, Ltd., today placed the stock on a dividend basis of 25 cents a quarter, equivalent to $1 a year, President Wallace R. Campbell announced today.

At the same time directors declared an original dividend of 25 cents a share in the form of a Christmas dividend payable December 16 to stockholders of record November 28. Outstanding shares total 1,658,900.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Move Downward in Less Active Dealings; Dollars Weaken; Wheat Lower.

New York, Nov. 19.—Stocks closed irregularly lower with small losses the rule. Sales volume declined with prices, the turnover dropping to 2,300,000 shares, and the list also was nardower than in recent days. Bonds were uncertain. December wheat fell ⅞ of a cent to 116⅝ cents a bushel. Dollars weakened a little, but no important foreign liquidation of securities was reported.

Dividend and bonus streams continued to run full, but the market paid less attention to them. It may for the time being feel surfeited with bullishness, and possibly the darker hue of the war news from Europe is doing something to depress spirits. Fighting among the leading powers of Europe would do more to harm this country's trade than any amount of gains in South America could overcome.

Another worry, or so they say, of traders is the talk of abolition of the capital gains tax. Nothing can be said convincingly in favor of that tax, but its removal likely would bring a good deal of selling of stocks. Opponents of the tax argue for just that purpose, in the interest of long term stability of prices and the prevention of a runaway bull market.

Were the tax removed the sales by those who had large profits would be offset to some extent at least by the purchases of traders who would risk making profits with the thought that they might keep them from the clutches of the tax collector. Passing of the tax from the books also would eliminate the usual heavy selling in the closing weeks of each year for the establishment of losses to be deducted from taxable income.

Airplanes Rise.

Early irregularity in price movements soon drifted into a decline which was successfully resisted by only a few groups and a handful of specialties. Sugar and airplane stocks were mostly higher. Sperry, Boeing, United Aircraft and North American were active. Guantanamo, Holly and Cuban American were the best sugars. Amusement shares held well, in spite of profit taking. A few were among the most active issues.

Utilities began to revive in the last hours' trading and closed a little higher. Rails tapered down, with a few exceptions. Union Pacific broke more than 5 points on a few sales. Motors acted rather heavy. Small losses were the rule for the steels, mail orders, oils and chemicals. Coppers, silvers and foods were mixed.

Strong specialties included American Agricultural, Bigelow Sanford Carpet, Curtis Publishing, International Paper preferred, Penney, Lehigh Portland Cement, Philip Morris, Shell Union, National Biscuit and United Fruit.

Clouds Hanging Low.

Brokers talked mostly of two subjects: a possible abolition of or reduction in the capital gains tax and the outlook for an open winter of hazing of stock exchange members by the SEC. Both were taken seriously enough. Stock Exchange memberships sold last at $115,000, a decline of $20,000 from the price of a week or so earlier. The bid price this morning was lowered to $105,000.

Bearishness on the price of exchange memberships came as a result of Chairman Landis of the SEC telling a stock exchange committee that he intended to go as far as he could in cutting into the activities of members. Among his first steps he mentioned certain restrictions on operations by floor traders and partners of member firms, but made it clear that his goal was elimination of trading by members on the floor, or at least an entire segregation of such trading from trading for account of clients.

Making Too Much Market.

Such a rule, long talked of, would greatly alter the present system of specialist—a stock exchange member who holds the "book" or account of most orders to buy or sell placed in a giyen stock. The specialist executes orders for both sides that come to him, and in addition he buys and sells for his own account. His own trading, according to the official view of the stock exchange, fills a gap in demand or supply that the total of outside trading orders sometimes leaves and thereby helps to make a market. Those who oppose the specialist system claim the specialist rarely goes more than a small fraction of a point from orders on his books, and that the net result of his trading is that he makes for himself small profits here and there (but tremendous in the aggregate) that otherwise would go to public traders.

Specialists.

Certain abuses in the specialist system grew up over the years. Rules adopted by the stock exchange itself corrected some of them, or were designed so to do. In many quarters the feeling persists, however unjustified it may be, that the floor trading specialist retains an unfair advantage over the outsider, which he is not entitled to enjoy, even though he pays the price of a stock exchange membership for the privilege.

On the surface the interest of the SEC in the matter is drawn primarily because it thinks floor trading tends to emphasize booms and bear markets; the SEC would control the specialist as a means of holding the stock market to an even keel rather than to put him on even terms with the outside trader. It is unlikely to have as much success on the first count as on the second, for so long as a public market for securities exists the trader will find a way to deal, directly or indirectly.

Confederate Bonds At $6 for $10,000

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—Wall street men, always eager to take a loss on securities as income taxes draw near, eyed wistfully today a loss of $9,994 on a $10,000 block of bonds. The securities, which fell at $6 under the auctioneers' hammer, were Confederate States of America 8 per cent bonds, due July 1, 1868.

Wage, Dividend Flow Headed Toward Billion

40 More Companies Add to Pay Rolls and Year-End Disbursements.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 19.—The year-end flow of dividends to shareholders and increased pay and bonuses to workers in American industry pointed toward the $1,000,000,000 mark today. With more than 40 companies adding about $30,000,000 to the dividend total and thousands of additional workers participating in wage and bonus gains, tabulations extending over the past month indicated:

Dividend disbursements aggregating $520,000,000 by 170 companies, most of it payable before Christmas, in the biggest year-end downpour of dollars Wall Street has seen since 1930 or 1929.

Wage increases approaching $150,000,000 annually and Christmas bonuses approximating $50,000,000 for upward of 1,500,000 workers.

Anaconda Copper, National Cash Register, Commercial Credit, Magma Copper, Newmont Mining, Texas Gulf Sulphur, the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad and Swift & Co. joined in a previous long list of companies in making the week a banner one for extra and increased dividends. The week's dividend total rose to about $220,000,000 for some 115 companies, counting regular payments.

Anaconda Extra.

Anaconda contributed $4,337,000 with an extra of 25 cents a share and a regular of the same amount for its 110,000 shareholders, payable December 21. Atlantic Coast Line ordered a payment of $1, totaling about $1,800,000; Newmont Mining $2 for a total of $1,063,292 and National Cash Register a 50-cent dividend amounting to about $800,000.

Swift & Co., Chicago, added about $3,500,000 with a special dividend of 30 cents a share and a quarterly payment of the same amount. Aside from $2 in extra and regular payments to shareholders totaling about $2,300,000, Commercial Credit, an installment financing concern, announced a bonus approximating $550,000 for 3,400 workers.

Dollar-sharing in the prosperous automotive industries spread with a Christmas payment of about $180,000 for 6,000 workers of the Eaton Manufacturing Co., Detroit. Pet Milk, St. Louis, announced a $50,000 bonus for 2,000.

Wage boosts averaging 10 per cent appeared to have swept major segments of the cotton and woolen textile industry as well as steel, estimated to be employing among them well over a million workers with

Leaders Warn Chest Workers To Press Drive

15 Per Cent Pledge Increase Declared Necessary to Go Over Tops.

need a 15 percent increase in pledges if Washington is to have a Chest. Things are more prosperous this year than they were last. There is no reason why Washington should not be a $2,000,000 Chest community

Increase Imperative.

"This is a great working organization. The main trouble is, Washingtonians don't understand what we want. Our fight cannot be won on the basis of last year's gifts—we must have increases. Those who can afford it should double their gifts over last year.

"With an optimistic spirit and the will to win, I feel the tide will turn and we will go on to victory," he concluded.

Jennings' brief but lashing talk brought resounding cheers from the crowded ballroom. Workers returned to their duties, determined to press the drive to its ultimate goal of $1,969,000 by Tuesday.

Thus far, the campaign has realized 60.61 per cent of its quota. Only three more report meetings are scheduled before the closing day.

Allen T. Burns, executive vice president of the Community Chest and council, reported that the Nation as a whole showed a 7 per cent gain over last year's drive.

"And Washington, with its splendid Chest organization, will follow the same path," he predicted.

Speaking over a radio hookup of the National Broadcasting Co., Joseph P. Tumulty, chairman of the Special Assignments Unit, appealed to Washington for support.

Tumulty Makes Plea.

"I plead with you radio listeners," he said, "to come along with us—and I cannot believe that residents of the District of Columbia will not heed our plea."

In contacting prospective donors, Tumulty declared, he has been forced to "restrain my impulses when I run up against these cold hearts."

Cheers again echoed through the hall when he announced a $10,000 gift from Joseph Davies, local attorney, and his wife.

Many individual unit members, it was announced, have exceeded their quotas by more than 100 per cent.

Unit reports yesterday and their total quota percentages are as follows:

Special assignments, reported by Tumulty—26 gifts, totaling $16,445, 82.14 per cent of quota.

Group solicitation, reported by John L. Vandegrife—3,440 gifts, totaling $24,008, 40.15 per cent of quota.

Metropolitan, reported by Percival Hall—904 gifts, totaling $13,393.16, 63.2 per cent of quota.

Governmental, reported by Maj. Gen. Merritte W. Ireland—14,527 gifts, totaling $72,317.83, 61.75 per cent of quota.

Capital, reported by Chairman Jennings—116 gifts, totaling $642.05, 33.59 per cent of quota.

Among the gifts of $100 or more reported yesterday were:

Judges Confer On Plans for Claims Court

Bar Leaders to Hear Judge Cayton Explain Proposal.

Proposed establishment of a small claims branch of Municipal Court—a "poor man's court"—will be discussed today at a meeting of the five Municipal judges and members of legal organizations interested in the movement.

The proposed court was suggested several months ago by Judge Nathan Cayton. Judge Cayton feels the new plan would not only expedite court procedure, but would allow "the little man" a chance to be heard.

Cases involving $50 or less would be heard in the small claims court, Judge Cayton has pointed out. Establishment of the new unit would not increase court expenditures and would require services of only one judge. The five judges would rotate—taking turns in the smaller court.

At present, Judge Cayton declared, 16 States require small claims courts. The approval of three Municipal Court judges could establish one in the District.

At today's meeting, scheduled for 2:30 p. m. in the courtroom of Judge George C. Aukam, will be representatives of the Municipal Court, District Bar Association; Women's Bar Association, Harlan-Terrill Lawyers' Club; Federation of Citizens Association and various members of labor and merchant groups.

$3,429,600 Army Plane Contract Let

A $3,429,600 contract for the purchase of approximately 120 observation planes for the Army Air Corps was awarded yesterday to the North American Aviation Co., Inglewood, Calif., according to a War Department announcement.

Secretary Woodring said the contract virtually completed Army aircraft purchases for the fiscal year 1937. A total of 600 planes have been ordered during the past year.

The new plane is a three-seated, midwing single-engine monoplane with retractable landing gear, capable of developing approximately 850 horsepower.

IN MEMORIAM

ELLIS, ANDREW J. In sad but loving remembrance of her dear husband and father, ANDREW J. ELLIS, who entered into heavenly rest three years ago today, November 20, 1933.
When alone in our sorrow and bitter tears flow,
There steals a dream of the sweet one ago,
Unknown to the world he stands by our side
And whispered, "Dear family, death cannot divide."

There is a face so dear we miss,
Still is the voice we loved.
God keep him safe with thee until
We meet some day above.
By his Devoted Wife, MAMIE, and Children, FRANK, LOTTIE, JOE, EMORY.

In loving remembrance of our dear grandfather, Andrew J. Ellis, who entered in heaven three years ago today November 20, 1933.
In memory you are ever near us.
And in our hearts you will ever live.
By his dear little Grandchildren.

TWOMEY, DANIEL D. In loving memory of our devoted father, DANIEL D. TWOMEY, who departed this life twelve years ago today, November 20, 1924.

Treasury Head Asserts RFC Must Continue

Morgenthau Scouts Rumor of Rift With Jones, Agency Head.

By the Associated Press.

A statement yesterday by Secretary Morgenthau favoring extension of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's lending powers blasted reports that he and Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the agency, were at odds over the future of the big lending corporation.

Telling his press conference "the time has not come yet when we can dispense with the RFC," the Treasury chief added that should a Congressional committee request his opinion, he would recommend a year's extension of its powers.

Unless this authority is continued by Congress, the pioneer recovery agency must start liquidation January 31.

Chairman Jones said recently a gradual reduction of RFC activities was being effected, but that some provision should be made for continuing commodity and railroad loans. These have accounted for a major portion of the corporation's lending in recent months.

Asked whether he thought the lending powers should be limited to these types of advances Morgenthau said that was "up to Mr. Jones."

Refutes Story of Rift.

For several weeks rumors have circulated that Jones and Morgenthau differed over whether the corporation should continue lending.

Thus far, the corporation has made $6,292,000,000 in loans to industry and financial institutions, of which $4,241,000,000 has been repaid. When its lending powers terminate finally, the law provides it must be liquidated within ten years.

It was not apparent what effect extension of RFC lending would have on next year's budget, but fiscal experts have said that if it were liquidated, the subsequent inflow of cash would help in balancing Government revenues and expenditures.

Troops Rushed to City After Natives Attack

Beirut, Lebanon, Nov. 19 (AP).—Troop reinforcements were rushed to the town of Tripoli tonight after natives attacked several military posts there. A strike in Tripoli, called by leaders demanding union of the Lebanese Republic with Syria, entered its twenty-sixth day.

(The Lebanese legislature Tuesday ratified a treaty with France, which upholds the mandate, providing for future independence for Lebanon. France also has agreed to give independence to neighboring Syria, also mandated to France.)

British Aim to Bring U. S. Into League

London, Nov. 19 (AP).—Chancellor of the Exchequer Neville Chamberlain tonight declared the keystone of British foreign policy was to bring the United States, Germany and Japan within the League of Nations.

Chamberlain told a political rally, "the league must be made stronger and this is the only way it could be done. We've got to realize that the league with those great nations—the United States, Germany and Japan—standing outside, is no longer capable of preserving the peace of the world."

Two Cubans Sentenced To Death for Bombing

Havana, Nov. 19 (AP).—An urgency court today sentenced Ramon Garcia Pujol and Mario Del Toro Rondon to death before a firing squad on conviction of dynamiting the newspaper El Pais last September 20.

Garcia Pujol was chief customs inspector of the port of Havana when arrested.

Pin-Ball Experts Perform in Court; One 'Makes Good'

Pin ball machine experts plied their trade in District Court yesterday when Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue indicated he would like to learn just what constituted skill in their operation and what made up the luck element.

William F. Janoska, one of those called upon to test the machines made high scores, and another, Theodore Garner, had little, if any, success.

Both were called in the suit of the Pioneer Novelty Co., which is seeking a permanent injunction to restrain the Police Department from confiscating their machines. The company contends its machines are operated and run on the "skill" basis, while the police, under orders to seize them, charge they are gaming machines in which the element of skill is only a minor part.

The hearing to determine the fate of the machines has been in progress for several days. It is expected to end today, with a definite pronouncement as to whether they can be operated or must be shelved because of alleged gaming features.

How Security Act Works

(Editor's Note: The Washington Post presents below more answers to questions about the Social Security Act.)

My boy is 14 and works at a soda fountain after school. Do he and the druggist have to report on that job for a Federal pension account?

Yes, the wage and payroll taxes effective January 1 apply to minors.

Must the youngster report his wages?

No, the employer makes all wage reports and tax payments, deducting half of the taxes from the worker's pay check and putting up the balance himself.

I'm a printer. Can I force my boss to pay me in full next year instead of deducting a cent from each dollar for the Government?

No.

I get $3,300 a year. Must my employer report the full amount to the Government?

Only the first $3,000 need be reported, no matter if a man gets $20,000 a year.

Will these reports be used to check up on other income tax returns?

They could be used for checking, but it has not been decided yet whether this will be done.

My wages will be taxed $30 next year. Can I deduct that $30 from my income in computing my regular income tax.

No.

In making out his income tax return, can the boss deduct the $30 excise tax he pays on my wages?

Yes.

Suppose my daughter qualifies for a pension and then marries, will she get it?

Yes.

How will she go about collecting it?

Between now and 1942, when the pensions begin, a system for paying claims probably will be set up across the country by the Security Board.

If my wage account shows $2,000 when I reach 65, how much will my pension be?

The minimum, $10 a month.

Suppose it is less than $2,000?

You will get a lump sum payment of 3½ per cent of the amount in the account.

Suppose it shows $150,000?

You get the maximum, $85 a month.

How long will it go on?

Until death, except that you will receive no pension in any month that you get wages in commerce or industry.

Will it be reduced if I'm left a legacy or have some income from savings?

No.

Suppose my account at 65 shows $5,000, but I worked only in four instead of the required five calendar years?

You get 3½ per cent of the $5,000, or $175, in one check.

What if I die at 66 after working 20 years?

Your estate will be entitled to a lump-sum payment of 3½ per cent of your account, less whatever you drew in pensions.

If I draw more than 3½ per cent in pensions before my death, my family gets nothing?

That's correct.

What if I have two jobs at once? Will there be two accounts?

No. Your wages from each will be taxed up to $3,000 in one year, and your individual account will be credited with the wages received from each firm up to $3,000 in one year. In other words, if you get $3,000 from each of two firms, you are taxed on each $3,000, and $6,000 is entered on your wage account.

If I go on working after 65, will my wages be taxed?

No.

I will be 65 years old two weeks from now. Do I have to apply for a pension account?

No. Persons who reach 65 before next January 1 do not have to report on their jobs.

Dangling Painter Saved.

Granite City, Ill., Nov. 19 (AP).—Burt Bareiter, 37, a painter, dangled more than an hour this afternoon 90 feet above the boiler room of a brewery here before he was rescued. Bareiter's foot caught in a hoist rope as he fell after losing his balance while painting a smokestack. He hooked one arm around a guy wire and yelled for help. Firemen aided in the rescue.

Ex-Wife Sees Obituary But Finds Mate Alive

Passaic, N. J., Nov. 19 (AP).—A divorced wife was surprised to read in newspapers the obituary of her former husband.

A woman's intuition led her to a worsted mill where she found him at work.

Police said he admitted inserting the obituary notice in newspapers in an attempt to escape alimony payments.

Claiming he owed her $175, the woman said she would ask he be cited for contempt.

Business Failures.

New York, Nov. 19 (AP).—Commercial failures in the United States numbered 166 in the week ended November 12, a rise of 9.9 per cent over the 151 reported the previous week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Germans Provide Home For Spanish Refugees

Koenigswinter, Germany, Nov. 19 (AP).—More than 3,000 refugees from Spain, it was announced today, are being distributed among towns and villages of the Rhine Valley for the winter.

The Nazi "strength-through-joy" movement organized a special department to care for the refugees, most of whom left all their property behind when they fled Spain. Children are being enrolled in schools connected with the Hitler youth movement.

St. Louis, Nov. 19 (AP).—The conviction of Grocer George W. Norris on a charge of perjury in the United States Senate's investigation of his candidacy against Senator George W. Norris in the 1930 Nebraska primary was reversed by the Eight District United States Circuit Court of Appeals today.
